ROOSEVELT BACKS CHECK-OFF

Husband Shot to Death; Wife Held

Today

Great, Big, Bad Farley.
Imitation Air War.
Insure, Then Kill Them.
Tampering? It's Done.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MR. FARLEY, who ran President Roosevelt's campaign and is now Postmaster General, is not supporting Mr. LaGuardia for Mayor of New York. So Mr. LaGuardia, throwing secrecy to the winds, tells the country that Mr. Farley is the "great, big, bad wolf" of politics, planning to make himself Governor at the next election and President of the United States in 1940. Stranger things have happened.

Mr. Farley doesn't drink, doesn't smoke, doesn't even talk, except when he must, officially. Such men are scarce and often successful.

NEW YORK CITY last night got an idea of the interesting "next war." It had been arranged for a squad of Army bombing planes, their bomb racks carrying "flares" of 50,000 candlepower, to fly over New York, drop the flares, and invite the people to do a little thinking.

A squadron of eighteen swift pursuit planes were to accompany the big bombers, showing how in real war they would attack and endeavor to fight off the enemy bombers.

FOR TODAY and tomorrow a great national air pageant is planned at Roosevelt Field, and it ought to educate the American public.

The Royal Air Force, in experiments above London, "proved" that a great city cannot possibly be protected against sudden attacks from the air. But a country as rich as this one could, with proper preparation, make such an attack improbable, even by war-led maniacs.

Convince the other nations that you possess and are ready to use modern machinery that could destroy their principal cities and wipe out their population and you will not be disturbed.

AMID ALL the killings, bombings, machine and sawed-off shotgun executions in our crime wave, nothing is more interesting than the "insurance racket." The racketeers select a victim, usually some poor drunkard, insure his life under a false name for their benefit, and give him enough bad alcohol to kill him.

In New York, a judge listens now to the case of racketeering gentlemen whose chosen victim, insured for $1,800, drank all they offered him, but would not die.

He did die, however, when forced by racketeers to inhale gas from an automobile exhaust. That is the story of the police.

THEY ALSO tell of a young woman, addicted to drink, made unconscious with alcohol, stripped naked, taken out of doors, where cold water was poured over her. When she died of pneumonia, the insurance was collected.

What other "good ideas" will be developed when repeal of prohibition comes to interfere with bootleg profits?

MR. G. C. MACGUIRE, member of the "Committee for a Sound Dollar and a Sound Currency," says in a telegram from Chicago:

"American Legion by unanimous vote went on record for a sound dollar and no inflation. Resolution was against tampering with our currency in any way."

The telegram adds:

"The mandate of this convention against inflation must be backed up by the sound people of America. We urge you to wire President Roosevelt and support him in keeping at bay these wild inflationist gamblers and those people who would destroy our dollar."

THE RESOLUTION "against tampering with our currency in any way" comes a trifle late. When you take a dollar that has been perched on the gold basis for two generations, suddenly kick it off that gold basis, and knock its value from 100 cents to 64 cents in gold, you certainly do considerable "tampering."

"YOUNG" STRIBLING, well-known prize fighter, is dead. An automobile collision cut off his foot as he was riding a motorcycle.

Stribling had fought three hundred prize fights. He excelled at various sports, was a good air pilot, speedboat racer, golf and basketball player, but "the real money is in prize-fighting," in our refined civilization, so he fought to get some of the real money.

Gene Tunney, who retired as heavyweight champion of the world, was paid one dollar a day by his grateful country when he fought as a marine, risking his life.

He was paid more than a million dollars for fighting in a prize ring quite safely, so far as life is concerned, $365 for 365 days in your country's service, $1,000,000 for thirty minutes in a prize ring.

IN NEW YORK yesterday was exhibited "the biggest book in the world," with one million signatures, demanding peace throughout the world forever.

This "peace book" embodies a pious thought, but it will take more than 1,000,000 signatures to establish permanent peace. What you write into the brains and intelligence of the succeeding generations of men, not what you write into a peace book, will end war.

In his pocket he had one five-cent piece, kept apparently for an emergency. The emergency

STRUGGLE FOR GUN BARED

Son Turns Mother Over to Police In Case

BULLETIN.

Joseph Rohrberg, 48, died today a short time after being admitted to St. John's Hospital suffering two bullet wounds alleged to have been inflicted by his wife during a quarrel.

Shot twice in the head, Joseph Rohrberg, 48, of 72 Transvaal avenue, Ross Township, today was in a serious condition following a struggle with his wife for a revolver during a family quarrel at their home.

The wife, Mrs. Joanne Rohrberg, 43, was detained at Woods Run Police Station for county detectives after being turned over to the officers by her son, Charles, 21. The husband was removed to St. John's Hospital.

Conflicting reports were told as to the cause of the shooting. According to the woman, the couple have been quarreling for several years. Refusal of her husband to permit Mrs. Rohrberg to visit the Suburban Hospital, Bellevue, where the son's wife, Katherine, is expected to become a mother, led to today's shooting.

Rohrberg, a structural iron worker, returned to his home last night after several weeks' absence, police said. Arising early today, the man is alleged to have entered his wife's room and begun to quarrel.

English-Speaking Unity

Responding to a request from the editor of the Sunday Sun, of Sydney, Australia, Mr. Hearst forwarded an editorial from the Hearst papers on the advantages of a friendly understanding between the United States and Australia and added:

THE ENGLISH-SPEAKING nations of the world stand now almost alone among nations for the freedom of thought and liberty of action that form the basis of the world's moral and material progress.

Why should not the mighty influence of those English-speaking nations in support of liberty and democracy be increased through co-operative alliance, rather than weakened by division and distrust?

The war clouds of Europe settle over London like a black fog, obscuring vision.

But the Dominions are becoming more and more the dominant factor in the British Empire, and the more London thinks in terms of the British Empire, the more she will realize the advantage of a co-operative alliance of English-speaking people to herself, to the Empire, and to the world.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Mr. Hearst's comment, and the editorial from the Hearst papers, were printed in the Sydney (Australia) Sunday Sun in a six-column display under the headlines:

"ENGLISH-SPEAKING NATIONS—UNITE! HEARST'S MESSAGE TO AUSTRALIA. WOULD SEND UNITED STATES FLEET HERE AS FRIENDLY GESTURE. CO-OPERATIVE ALLIANCE. LONDON'S VIEW OBSCURED."

"It is pointed out that an alliance between the United States and Australia is impracticable unless there is first an alliance between Great Britain and America, to which it previously had been thought that Mr. Hearst was antagonistic."

Boy Dead in Hit-Run Case, Freeport Officer Accused

FREEPORT, Oct. 7.—Chief of Police Milton Cunningham, of Freeport, was at liberty on bond today, accused of being the hit-and-run driver who killed 14-year-old Herbert Frantz, of South Buffalo Township.

Cunningham was accused of driving off after the accident, according to Coroner A. W. Dosch, of Armstrong County.

The accident occurred on Route 28, near Slate Lick. Young Frantz's companion, a boy named McCracken, was injured, but, it is believed, not seriously.

Cunningham was arrested later in Freeport by the State Highway Patrol. He was released when he posted $1,000 bond.

PRESIDENT TO FORCE MINE WAR TRUCE

Steel Industry Heads Obey Call to White House

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt, steel manufacturers operating coal mines, and NRA executives went into conference at the White House today to seek a settlement of the Western Pennsylvania coal strike.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—The influence of the Presidential office was invoked today to its fullest extent in the effort to restore peace to the coal fields of Central and Western Pennsylvania.

At a conference with leaders of the steel industry today, President Roosevelt was expected to inform them that it was their patriotic duty to conquer fears of union influence in their operations and to grant to the miners of their bituminous coal shafts the "check-off," or deducation of union dues from their pay envelopes.

TAYLOR, SCHWAB CALLED

Called in were Myron Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel, and Charles M. Schwab, chairman of Bethlehem Steel, with Nathan Miller, counsel for the Iron and Steel Institute.

The check-off alone, officials said, stood in the way of accord. The President had to step in, it was established authoritatively, because Hugh S. Johnson, NRA head, had exhausted his own persuasive resources.

There were strong intimations that if the steel men did not accede, the President would use his authority under the law to modify the coal code, or impose a separate code upon the steel-owned mines to require that union dues be so deducted.

This was a reserve power, however, which he was not expected to use, though its suggestion was regarded as indication of the determination of the Executive to carry the point.

Whatever solution is found, if any, must be worked out of a situation now complicated with varying opinions and demands.

The strike started at steel corporation mines with the miners demanding that the companies "sign the code." Gradually, the strike cry changed to "recognize the union," with the miners insisting that the steel subsidiaries make labor contracts with the United Mine Workers of America similar to those the union negotiated with commercial coal operators in the area.

Last week, the steel men made an agreement with the President to pay the same wages and use the same hours as those provided by the code and union contracts.

The President, the recovery administrator, and union officials understood the agreement was practical union recognition without so saying in as many words. They understood that even deduction of union dues from the miners' pay was included.

Australian Advises Naval Co-operation With U.S.

By JOHN G. PATON
Universal Service Special Cable.

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 7.—Increasing naval and political co-operation among the United States, Great Britain and Australia is urged by Maj. Goldenstedt, chief political adviser to former Australian Premier William Hughes.

Maj. Goldenstedt, erstwhile member of the British political service in the Near East, referred to an article by William Randolph Hearst printed in the Sydney Sunday Sun under the Sun's heading, "English-Speaking Nations—Unite!" He declared:

"While the fundamental principles of Australian foreign policy must be governed by her position within the Empire, it cannot be overlooked that her future is inseparably linked with the future of the Pacific.

"Both Britain and the United States are interested in restricting Asiatic expansion which, if it proceeds southward, will vitally affect both nations.

"Australians must remember that Japan quits the League of Nations in 1935, and with Britain's inability to send the entire grand fleet to Pacific waters even if Australian shores are attacked, it must be increasingly obvious that with development of naval bases along the Australian coast, the American fleet could co-operate in the southern Pacific to the advantage of both countries.

"Such an arrangment, whether it takes the form of a treaty or some kind of reciprocal benevolence, would bring American naval intervention in the western and southern Pacific within the realms of possibility.

"As thing are, neither America nor Britain can back Pacific policies with naval force should it become necessary for either of them to do so.

"Australia's forengn policy must be elastic and capable of harmonizing with altered circumstances. Australia might well agree with Abraham Lincoln, who said that he did not control events, but was controlled by events."

GRIFFITH STADIUM, WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The first sell-out of the 1933 World Series loomed this afternoon as the New York Giants, National League champions, prepared to meet the Washington Senators, American League champions, in the fifth contest.

A bright sun flooded the city as the two teams warmed up for the battle, which may prove the deciding one of the series. New York needs one victory to clinch the title.

While the teams were preparing to renew hostilities, Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis went into a secret conference with the four World Series umpires concerning the outbreak in yesterday's game, as the result of which Manush, Washington outfielder, was chased from the field by Umpire Charley Moran.

Manager Terry stuck to his announcement on his pitching, which means that Hal Schumacher will be on the slab in the fifth game. Pilot Cronin, of the home team, was reported as undecided as to his selection. Alvin Crowder may go to the slab.

The hundreds of writers in Washington were still digging into

PICKETS STAY AT POSTS

As President Roosevelt called officials of the captive mines and high steel industry officials into conference today, union miners on a "holiday" continued to picket the mines and steeel works. There was little activity in the pickets' ranks in Fayette County and mines in Allegheny County were hardly noticed.

The miners' drive to cripple the United States Steel Corporation through preventing West Virginia coal being hauled into its huge Clairton plant, was continued. Railroad officials at Brownsville said little progress had been made.

In the Colonial mines district of the H. C. Frick Coke Company there was considerable shooting Sleuths Guard Justices; Some Fun, Eh, Boss?

The Longue Vue Country Club is "a swell joint"—and do they put up a smell meal out there!

That's what the city detectives think of the place. They were out there last night, five of them, along with six motorcycle police and eight county detectives, to guard the justices of the Supreme Court, who were having a dinner.

The justices felt they had been threatened. As they wer leaving the Duquesne Club, en route to Long Vue, somebody passed in an auto and shouted:

"We're going to get you tonight."

So the police were called. And for several hours they shivered in the cold outside the club. Harmar Denny, Jr., the public safety director, was directing them, from the inside.

But all ended well. Nobody "got" the august justices and the sleuths were finally called in for a snack. Unfortunately, most of them had eaten just before going to the club but they managed to put away a fair share. And today a spokesman said for them:

"Boy, that's a swell joint out there. I have my stew at Al's before I go out there but if I know they put up food like that I stay away from those hash houses."

The sleuths believe they were served a combination of lobster and fish.

Charleroi Miners Return to Work

CHARLEROI, Pa., Oct. 7.—Miners of two local coal commercial concerns returned to their jobs yesterday, joining several other mines in Northern Washington County and adjoining sections of Allegheny County in resumption of operations. The two mines which are now working in full are the McMahan and the Pfile operations.

Man Killed, Five Injured In Year's Heaviest Fog

One man was killed, five were injured and automobile and street car traffic imperiled as the heaviest fog of the year blanketed the Pittsburgh district last night and early today.

Swerving to avoid colliding with another car in the early morning fog, Alfred Nowatney, 58, a restaurant proprietor of Chester, W. Va., was fatally injured when his automobile plunged from the Lincoln highway, near Clinton, according to a Coroner's report.

He was taken by a passing motorist to the Valley Hospital at Sewickley, where he died a short time later.

Mrs. Martha Lapper, of Monaca, and Harold Day, of Crafton Heights, the latter in a critical condition, were in the Suburban General Hospital at Bellevue, with injuries suffered in an automobile crash in Avalon, police reported. Three others were slightly injured.

NRA IN 'DEEP WATER,' ROOSEVELT TAKES OVER REINS

MASTER RETAIL CODE ADDS TO CRISIS

'Stop Loss' Provisions Loom as Menace; Disputes Grow

By LEIGH MATTESON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Vitally important code problems today had led the NRA into such deep water that President Roosevelt probably will function as its active pilot for the next few weeks.

His authority was invoked yesterday by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson in the "captive" mine strike situation.

Once he has solved that problem, he will be faced with the necessity of deciding what to do about the "stop loss" provisions now in the master retail code.

With the retail code out of the way, the President then will be called upon to decide if he wishes to embark on a series of novel legislative and credit experiments to revive the huge construction industry under a code.

'POLICY' MEMBERS SPLIT

The "policy" members of the NRA remain widely split on the "stop loss" method of preventing cut-throat price competition in the retail trade.

Johnson is a member of the group of "practical" men who believe minimum price fixing on a wholesale cost plus 10 per cent basis is economically "safe."

Expert mathematical economists within the organization continue, however, to "prove" with charts and symbols and equations, that the "stop loss" features of the retail code will force a large number of merchants to the edge of bankruptcy and then the government can save them only by inflating the currency "indefinitely."

In addition, the NRA Consumers' Advisory Board is opposed to the minimum price fixing on the ground it will result in consumer gouging.

"SAFE" CODE DESIRED

The retail code will vitally affect the interests of every person in the United States, and the results of its operation are directly tied to the outcome of the whole recovery program. Johnson wishes to recommend the code only in a "safe" form.

When the retail code has finally been approved, the construction industry codes problems will receive the President's closest attention.

The industry directly provides employment to about 1,300,000 workers in normal building times, but now only a tiny fraction of that number are at work. Construction is virtually at a standstill throughout the nation, and experts of the NRA research and planning division have "proven" it will remain that way until at least 1937 unless drastic new experiments in financing and taxing can be inaugurated under the master code of the industry.

The turnover of capital goods in the nation also is directly involved on a large scale in the construction code problem.

NEW NRA RULING CUTS HOURS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Because the Blue Eagle agreements now have less than three months to run, President Roosevelt yesterday ordered a modification for all signed after October 1, eliminating permission for working mechanical employes as much as 40 hours a week for six weeks during the total life of the agreement.

On all new agreements, factory or mechanical workers and artisans may not be employed more than 35 hours a week between now and December 31, when the agreements expire. That has been the basic requirement since the agreements were distributed in late July, except for the elastic clause which has been cut out.

No agreement signed before October 1 is affected by the new ruling, neither are the modified agreements authorized for many industries and trades which submitted codes.

U. S. 'BUY NOW' DRIVE SPEEDED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Widespread co-operation of business houses with the Recovery Administration's "buy now" campaign starting next week was announced today on a basis of responses received.

The NRA said:

> "Among the hundreds of responses are scores pledging increased advertising appropriations, the presentation of new or improved products, and the maintenance of fair prices. Every branch of industry and trade has enlisted in the drive to stimulate and capitalize on the new consumer purchasing power created as a result of increased payrolls."

Small merchants have acted already, newspapers reported, by increased advertising reservations. Advertising agencies also reported to the NRA the receipt of calls from large clients for the revision upward of newspaper and magazine advertising schedules in anticipation of a new volume of business.

FARM CREDIT PLAN PUSHED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt announced yesterday that the first concrete move in his latest effort to raise commodity prices and increase farm purchasing power would be the immediate creation of a credit corporation to lend to farmers on crop security.

The corporation, whose personnel is now being considered, will have an initial capitalization of $3,000,000, and its first duty will be to carry out the administration's promise to lend cotton farmers 10 cents a pound on their present crop if they agree to join in the campaign designed to reduce acreage by 40 per cent next year.

The corporation will have an authority to lend on other commodities, but cotton is the only crop now being considered for benefits.

The agency will be responsible to the President and Secretary Wallace probably will be a member.

SEE ROOSEVELT BANK ACTION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Early announcement of administration plans for loosening funds in closed banks and increasing the capital of those now operating is expected from President Roosevelt.

The President was represented today as having been prepared to make these plans known in some detail in his speech at the American Federation of Labor memorial exercises in honor of the late Samuel Gompers, but decided to postpone the announcement.

A White House statement yesterday said Henry Bruere, New York banker, would be a liaison officer to watch the activities of all federal credit agencies and those having functions affecting all kinds of banks.

He will keep the President advised as to the activities of these agencies.

BALK PROTEST IN AMBRIDGE

Beaver County deputy sheriffs continued their tight grip on affairs in Ambridge today. They emphasized their hold on the situation by preventing a protest meeting scheduled last night in a lot at Eleventh and Merchant streets.

The meeting had been called by the Steel and Metal Workers' Industrial Union to protest Thursday's fighting outside the Spang-Chalfant plant, in which one man was slain and a score or more shot or beaten. Handbills announcing the meeting had been distributed surreptitiously.

But the deputies and Police Chief John W. Flocker patrolled the district. More than 1,000 persons gathered, but the police kept them moving. And Flocker warned:

> "We'll break up this thing if we have to use our clubs again."

The deputies' only problem during the long night was in keeping warm. Improvised stoves were erected in the streets.

One man was arrested — Dan Benning, of Beaver road, Ambridge. He was accused of tossing the brick which hit Thayer Peters, a Spang-Chalfant employe, when Peters tried to enter the plant some hours before the big fight Thursday.

A check of the casualty list showed two of the victims, including the slain Adam Pietraszewski, were mere spectators, two were deputies, three were pickets and one a Spang-Chalfant worker.

Pinchot, Wife Revealed As Airplane Pilots

HARRISBURG, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—If, as and when Gov. Gifford Pinchot and his dynamic wife re-enter the political arena, an aerial attack is indicated.

The tall chief executive, he of the long white mustache, and his wife have flown more than 2,000 miles in the last few weeks and both have taken their turn at the controls.

Pinchot, flying to keep an appointment with President Roosevelt at Hyde Park a few days ago piloted the plane all the way and recently Mrs. Pinchot helped fly a plane to Des Moines and back to Harrisburg.

Neither the Governor nor his wife have committed themselves as to their political futures, but insistent reports have it that he will campaign for the United States Senate next year and that Mrs. Pinchot will run for Congress.

VANDERGRIFT, Pa., Oct. 7.—(INS.)—Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of the Governor, will fly from the state capital to Vandergrift to address a mass meeting of steel workers in Vandergrift district mills at nearby Apollo on October 11.

James C. Eakin, organizer of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, the steel men's union, announced today he had received a telegraphic acceptance from the militant first lady of Pennsylvania to his invitation that she speak at the rally.

during the night. No casualties were reported.

More than 100 pickets were on duty in Brownsville early today to induce shopmen and train crews from entering the yards of the Monongahela Railway, which is said to have been hauling 650 cars of West Virginia coal into the Pittsburgh area. Today 500 shopmen and train crews boarded trains to enter the shops, while pickets huddled around bon fires in Main street, Brownsville, adjacent to the shops. Six details of state police were on duty.

MINES CLOSED

Forty-five deputies from the sheriff's office started early today to guard mines in the county and then discovered there were no pickets on duty. The Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation's mines at Coverdale was closed and there was no activity at the Pittsburgh Coal Company's Castle Shannon and Library operations.

The Moon Run Coal Company's mine on Steubenville pike was operating with 70 men, to make up their weekly schedule of hours. No pickets appeared there.

Bands of roving miners continued to visit the smaller operations in nearby mining districts, and reported much success in inducing miners to stop working until the captive mines recognize the union.

At Greensburg, Frank Hughes, president of District No. 3, United Mine Workers, said he expected all mines to resume operations Monday.

TROOPERS ON GUARD

There was more activity in the Panhandle district. State troopers were on guard as 225 men went to work in Montour No. 9 mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, near McDonald. Approximately 300 pickets were on duty.

The Francis mine of the Greensburg-Connellsvile Coal and Coke Company, near Burgettstown, operated with 125 men today. At Avella 200 men continued working in the Jefferson Coal and Coke Company's mine. There was no disturbance anywhere in the district.

RUSS PROBLEM NEAR ACTION

High administration sources say the question is "moving into advanced stages." So far has the study progressed that conservative spokesmen said early personal consideration by Mr. Roosevelt looking to final disposition was a "fifty-fifty" chance.

Trade benefits expected to flow from diplomatic relations are providing the stimulus in behalf of recognition. Russia wants to buy through credits—about a billion dollars worth is a late estimate by her commissar of foreign affairs, M. Litvinoff. The United States wants to sell—especially to a potentially huge foreign market.

Indications were that the President's ultimate decision probably would not mean swift unconditional recognition, but that final action would result from negotiations covering numerous differences.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Oct. 7.—Three lonely pickets stood in silence early today as a long fleet of motor cars and trucks passed over Steubenville's fog-bound streets into the Pope mill of the Weirton Steel Company.

Three hundred men returned to work, officials said, in the only mill of the Weirton Steel Company in this region attempting to operate. No attempt has been made to reopen the Weirton mills at Weirton or Clarksburg, W. Va.

The return of workers to their tasks today was in strange contrast to the return of workers on Thursday when several automobiles were stoned and pickets clubbed and gassed by deputies.

STONE HURLED

Ten minutes after a proclamation signed jointly by Mayor James C. McMaster, of Steubenville, and Sheriff Ray B. Long, of Jefferson County, had been posted in the vicinity of the Pope works late yesterday forbidding picketing, a stone was hurled at workers leaving the mill. He was arrested. Union officials said he was not a member of their organization.

Jack Reese, chairman of the Pope lodge of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, said today that his life had been threatened because one of the workers who returned to the mill was beaten at Fourth and Market street. Reese said members of his family and his aides also had received threats.

PROBES PICKET BAN

Reese also announced plans for a conference with Mayor McMaster and Sheriff Long to ascertain reasons for the edict banning picketing and congregations near mill property.

In Weirton the situation was quiet. No attempt was made to reopen the plant, and E. T. Weir, chairman of the board of the National Steel Corporation, announced no plans for its reopening had been made.

Reiterating his oft repeated declaration that the Amalgamated Association would never be recognized, that the policy of the company has always been for an open shop, Mr. Weir announced enough men to operate the Weirtton mills have signified their desire to return to work. He said no outside labor would be employed.

came, and mercifully took him away. Whatever is done will be done too late for him, in this world.

ALREADY THE government finds that the kind of government we have is all right when it comes to coercing the individual employer, but it seems to amount to little where organized labor is concerned.

Thousands of miners in Pennsylvania defy the government request to return to work under the NRA code. What can you do about it?

Lupe Velez Says She'll Wed But Johnny Says 'No'

LUPE VELEZ

'Just Out of Trouble,' Says Divorced Weissmuller

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Johnny Weissmuller, one of the he-men of the films, and Lupe Velez, vivacious little Mexican actress, had Hollywood guessing today.

Miss Velez said she would marry the actor, a former world's swimming champion, within four days.

Weissmuller, who only yesterday had his final divorce decree from Bobbe Arnst officially entered in court records, countered with the statement:

> "I'm just out of trouble and, believe me, I'm going to stay out."

Miss Velez and Weissmuller have been close friends for several months, the swimmer replacing Gary Cooper, the actor, in the affections of the petite actress. Miss Velez and Cooper had often been reported engaged.

Lupe has an adopted child, who recently was threatened by kidnapers. The child is the daughter of her sister.

QUIZ SUMMONS MISSING HOPSON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Senate investigators were attempting today to serve a subpena on H. C. Hopson, vice president of Associated Gas and Electric Company, whose whereabouts were disclosed to them yesterday by company attorneys after weeks of futile search.

Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, told the committee yesterday Hopson was willing to appear under subpena. Before Hurley's statement, committee agents had threatened to seek newspaper aid to find the officials.

Hurley, who appeared as counsel for the company and its stockholders, said, however, that Hopson would only produce the company's books under subpena.

Ferdinand Pecora, determined counsel of the committee, immediately ordered a subpena for Hopson rushed to Chicago, where Hurley said he could be located, and they expected to serve it today.

Police Protecting Delivery of Coal

BEAVER, Pa., Oct. 7.—Normal deliveries of coal, interrupted by pickets, have been resumed in Beaver County communities under police protection. Scattered mines throughout the county are picketed.

'Primo the Rat' Trains To Battle Snakes Again

GROVE CITY, Pa., Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Now dubbed "Primo Carnera" because of the wallop he packs, Grove City's snake-conquering white rat is in training for a return bout.

In the rat cage in the biology department of Grove City College, "Primo," fat and saucy since he killed seven young rattlesnakes and kayoed two heavyweight rattlers two weeks ago, is getting in shape through almost daily battles with rodent "sparring partners."

"Primo" rules the rat cage with a snarl, and students say he will be "in the pink" when he again faces the two snakes, in about a fortnight.

They're not so sure about the badly-beaten rattlers, but Prof. A. G. Wood, head of the department, points out that everything depends upon the snakes' appetite.

The fight that brought fistic fame to "Primo" started after Prof. Wood offered the rat to the snakes as an evening meal. The professor reveals that the rat's victory may have been a trifle fluky. The two big rattlers weren't hungry.

LABOR, CAPITAL WARNED BY PRESIDENT

Ready to Lasso Rebels, He Tells Audience at Gompers Memorial

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Standing in the shadow of a monument erected to Samuel Gompers, organized labor's great leader, President Roosevelt today called upon both capital and labor to re-dedicate themselves to public service in the war against the depression, just as they joined hands to meet another great emergency in 1917.

In so doing, the President took occasion to indict both labor "hot-heads who think results can be attained by noise and violence," and die hard employers "who shudder at anything new . . . who think in terms of dollars and cents instead of in terms of human lives."

Some of these recalcitrants on both sides, he warned, may have "to be lassoed and put into a corral" before national recovery is assured, and his plain inference was that the government would not hesitate to adopt this course where circumstances warranted.

CUT A SMALL FIGURE!

Fortunately, he said, these are in the minority in both groups, and "cut a very small figure in the total of employers and employes alike who are going along wholeheartedly in the war against depression."

Speaking particularly to organized labor, Mr. Roosevelt invited its leaders to follow Gompers' example in the war years. Were he alive today, the President said, he would be co-operating with the NRA in the fight against the depression.

The President spoke in glowing terms of Gompers' long fight for social justice and betterment of labor conditions.

SCORES HOT-HEADS

After praising Gompers, the President said:

> "In the field of organized labor there are problems just as there were in the spring of 1917—questions of jurisdiction which have to be settled quickly and effectively in order to prevent the slowing-up of the general program. There are the perfectly natural problems of selfish individuals who seek personal gain by running counter to the calm judgment of sound leadership. There are hot-heads who think that results can be obtained by noise or violence; there are insidious voices seeking to instill methods or principles which are wholly foreign to the American form of democratic government.
>
> "On the part of employers there are some who shudder at anything new. There are some who think in terms of dollars and cents instead of in terms of human lives; there are some who themselves would prefer government by a privileged class instead of by majority rule.
>
> "But it is clear that the sum of the recalcitrants on both sides cuts a very small figure in the total of employers and employes alike who are going along wholeheartedly in the war against depression."

State Beer Tax Sets Record for Month

HARRISBURG, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Beer and wine put $545,180 in the state's pocketbook during September, a new high for any one month since the state tax on the beverages has been in effect.

In its five-month existence, the tax has yielded $2,575,579, an average of about half a million dollars monthly. Should this continue, it would bring in $12,000,000 in the two-year period it was imposed. The Legislature estimated $10,000,000 would be returned.

Bans Interference With Coal Dealers

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Oct. 7.—Interference with coal dealers here, preventing deliveries to homes will not be permitted, Chief of Police John F. Haven, declared today.

He continued:

> "The police department is supplied with sufficient gas to meet any emergency that arises."

Domestic Supplies Of Coal Menaced

PROPOSE STUDY OF SCHOOL REVENUE

11 Resolutions Adopted By Conference Ending Today

Eleven resolutions have been adopted by the Western Pennsylvania Education Conference which concludes in the Oakland Community Center today. Gov. Pinchot and Superintendent of Public Instruction James N. Rule were lauded for constructive leadership in educational movements.

An intensive study of revenue sources for education in Pennsylvania was recommended to forestall further taxation of real estate. The early adoption of a new principle for distribution of state subsidies was urged and the $25,000,000 bond issue at the general election next month was approved.

The conference is sponsored by city and county schools, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Frick Education Commission, the Pennsylvania Education Association, Pittsburgh Council, Parent-Teacher Association; University of Pittsburgh, Western Pennsylvania School for the Blind and the Progressive Education Association.

Twenty-six divisional conferences were scheduled today, speakers being noted Eastern educators.

At a late afternoon session yesterday Prof. David Snedden, of Columbia University Teachers' College, said:

"It is my conviction that by 1960 all children between the ages of 10 and 18 will be attending full-time schools. Children under 10 will be required to attend school only when their home and play-place environments are deemed by the proper authorities to be inadequate for their best growth."

Other speakers were Dr. Florence M. Teagarden, of the University of Pittsburgh; Dr. Boyd H. Bode, Ohio State University; Dr. George D. Strayer, of Columbia; Judge Benjamin Lencher, and John F. Brougher, of the State Department of Public Education.

LAMSON JESTS ON LAST RIDE

Universal Service.

The 31-year-old former Stanford University press executive, condemned to die on the gallows December 15 for the murder of his pretty wife last May, left the jail at San Jose yesterday.

He was able to "wisecrack" with the best of them, to chat in German with Sheriff William J. Emig, who was escorting him to what may prove his last home on earth.

It was windy. A particularly mischievous gust snatched Deputy Sheriff Felix Cordray's hat from his head. It was new and as it dashed to the pavement two cars following ran over it.

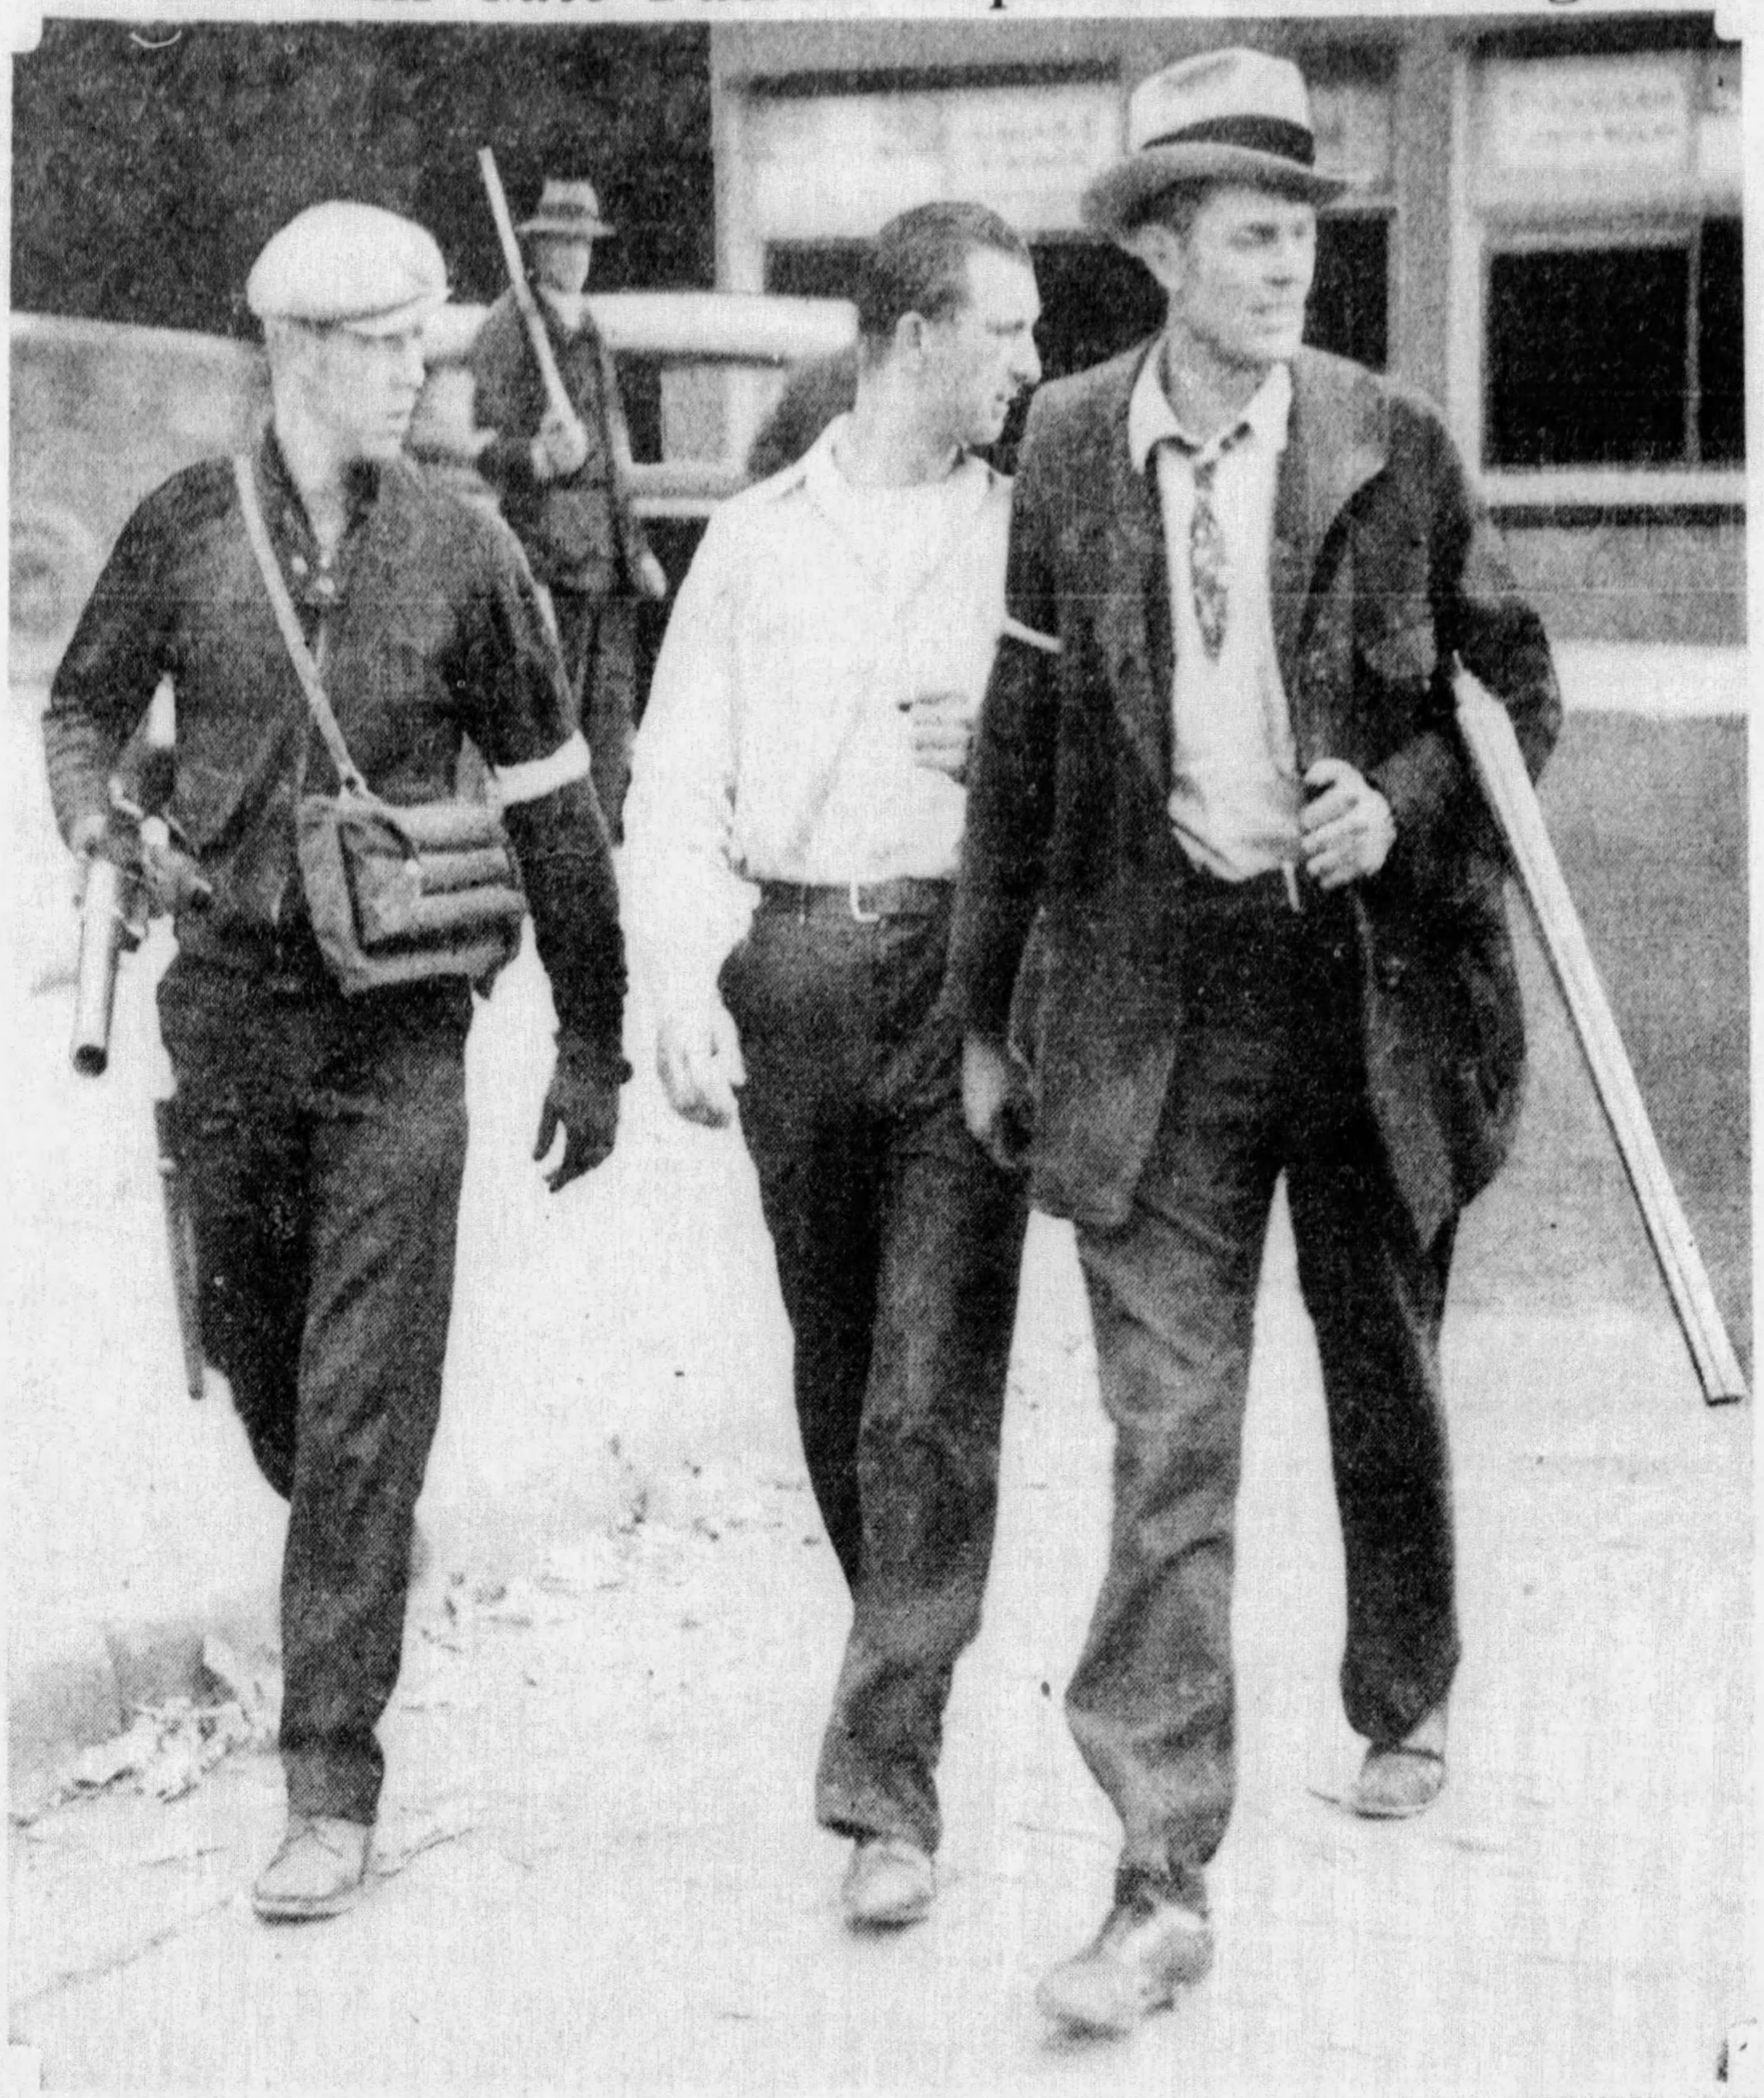
Boy, 18, Arrested On Girls' Charges

Tony Shilly, 18, of 290 Hays Glen street, was being held in South Side Police Station today after he is alleged to have attacked a 14-year-old girl and attempted to attack a 15-year-old girl, according to police. Police said Shilly molested the girls, who were walking with two others, at Baldwin and Riverton roads.

The Mill Gate Patrol: Deputies in Ambridge



HEAVILY-ARMED DEPUTIES PATROLLING AMBRIDGE ..... TYPICAL OF MORE THAN 200 IN A HASTILY RECRUITED ARMY

Beaver County deputy sheriffs swinging along an Ambridge street in one of the unceasing patrols of the zone marked by serious trouble two days this week. Notice that one is armed with a tear gas projectile gun (ammunition for which is carried in that canvas bandolier) and a mace, another with a shotgun. In the rear stands a man with his gun on his shoulder, sentry-fashion. The coatless man has just been taken into custody on a charge of picketing. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

LINDYS REMAIN 'PRISONERS'

International News Service.

ST. BRIDE'S-SUPER-ELY, Wales, Oct. 7.—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh continued as "mystery guests" here today, keeping the inhabitants of this little Welsh town, and the entire British public as well, in a state of speculation regarding their present and future plans.

The Lindberghs are voluntary prisoners in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Morgan, brother-in-law and sister of Mrs. Lindbergh, where they have barricaded themselves against a group of 70 newspapermen who for three days have been trying to "solve the Lindbergh mystery."

Mrs. Lindbergh was seen to arrive alone on Thursday. It was denied her husband was there. Yesterday, however, Morgan admitted to the press that Col. Lindbergh was his guest and that he would stay three or four days.

Robe, Camera Taken From Babcock Home

An automobile robe valued at $100, a camera, a pair of chauffeur's gloves and a hat were stolen yesterday from the home of E. V. Babcock, former Mayor and County Commissioner, at 5135 Ellsworth avenue, police reported.

WRITER FREED IN PLOT CASE

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 7.—Sidney Bartlett, scenario writer, did not have two hirelings beat and attempt to disfigure John Warburton because the handsome English actor once slapped Alice White, the county grand jury decided yesterday.

However, indictments were returned charging Martin Block and Russell Brown with robbing Warburton of $25 when they set upon him September 16. Bail for the two men who, in confessions to police, asserted the robbery was incidental to an attack upon their victim because he struck the petite blonde actress when she angered him, was set at $25,000 each.

As a result of the asserted confessions, the actress, Bartlett, Warburton, Block and Brown and investigating officers were subpenaed by the grand jury.

Bartlett was cleared, it was learned, because the only testimony linking him with the beating was the uncorroborated statement of Block, an alleged accomplice in the purported plot to disfigure the handsome Warburton as a "revenge" move.

Hints Night Club Man Held in Mail Robbery Slain

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green today suggested that the bullet fired into the head of Edgar B. Lebensberger, 40, wealthy night club owner, a few hours before his indictment on charges of complicity in a $500,000 mail robbery may not have been self-inflicted.

Green made his statement after a coroner's verdict of "suicide while temporarily insane" had been returned and police apparently were satisfied that the man was a suicide.

He refused to state his "reasons," but said they were woven into the robbery for which John J. (Boss) McLaughlin, former state legislator, and Joe Sans, credit manager in Lebensberger's clubs, also were indicted by the federal grand jury yesterday. They were arrested immediatly and taken to the Du Page County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bonds.

FOUR HELD IN DENVER

DENVER, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—United States District Attorney Thomas Morrissey announced today a $500,000 mail robbery in Chicago last December was virtually solved with the arrest here of three men and a woman and the suicide in Chicago of Edgar B. Lebensberger.

Those held are: Raymond Holwell, 44, Denver stock promoter; Theodore Norell, 27, Denver; Mrs. Bernice Sullivan, 32, of Chicago, who officers said resided at Norell's home with his mother, and Francis Sullivan, 43, of Chicago, husband of Mrs. Sullivan.

GUNGIRL FREED IN JAIL KILLING

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—After deliberating nine hours, a jury in Kings County Court last night acquitted Mrs. Cecelia McCormick, 21, mother of a 5-month-old son, of the murder of Head Keeper McConnell, of Raymond Street Jail.

The jury sustained her counsel's contention that she was temporarily insane when she smuggled into the jail the pistol with which her husband, Andrew "Ginger" McCormick, shot the keeper and then committed suicide last November in an attempted jail break.

Although County Judge Taylor had warned persons in the courtroom to make no demonstration when the verdict was returned, two women screamed when it was announced, and several spectators applauded. Mrs. McCormick seemed on the verge of fainting, but quickly got control of herself.

MAN DETAINED IN WIFE'S DEATH

Held in County Jail today on a District Attorney's detainer, Robert Soles, of 2018 Jenny Lind street, McKeesport, faced another quiz in the reopened probe of the death of his wife, Mrs. LeRoux Soles, last June 19.

The investigation was reopened by District Attorney Andrew T. Park at the instance of Harry D. Lynch, father of Mrs. Soles. Her death was listed at the morgue as a suicide.

Soles was questioned early yesterday and late last night was taken to the room in which Mrs. Soles met death, to face another interrogation.

Put on Your Clothes, Judge Tells 'Venus'

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Municipal Judge Erwin J. Hasten warned Mrs. Elinore Benninger that she "must put on something." She was accused of posing as Venus at a Century of Progress.

Meanwhile he continued the case, declaring he would not "permit any open nudity in the city of Chicago."

PASTORS HEARD AT DAVIS TRIAL

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—The defense in the lottery trial of Senator James J. Davis yesterday sought to prove that the Pennsylvanian was not present at Mooseheart, Ill., when his lodge conducted a drawing for charity.

Defense witnesses, including Catholic and Protestant chaplains and officials of Mooseheart—the Orphans Home of the Loyal Order of Moose—each testified they did not see Davis in the building where the drawing was held.

Davis is charged specifically with sending lottery tickets across state lines. Theodore Miller is on trial with him. Davis is director-general of the Moose and Miller is a high official in the fraternity.

The Senator's sister-in-law, Mrs. Samuel Davis, who is postmistress at Mooseheart, testified that she had written the Senator's wife to have "Jim come out" from Washington and see his sick brother. The government had sought to show that Davis went to Mooseheart to attend the drawing.

NEW YORK 'LEFT IN RUINS' BY BOMBERS

Helen M'Closkey Wins Second Place in Air Treasure Hunt

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Manhattan's tall towers were just a pile of ruins today in the eyes of Army aviators who blasted the city with a spectacular, though theoretical, bombing attack as a prelude to the national air pageant at Roosevelt Field.

The two-day air show is bringing together nearly 200 amateur pilots and speed fliers in a program of stunts, maneuvers and races, including an assault on the landplane speed record of 305 miles an hour. Proceeds of the show, which gets under way today, will go to charity.

The bombing raid last night lasted less than half an hour, but in that time 30 Army planes had shelled the metropolis into theoretical helplessness and had darted away. Actually, the exhibition was a spectacle of brilliant flares and reverberating blasts. The flares flooded Manhattan and the New Jersey shore with daylight as they floated down beneath the planes.

The army planes will take part in the pageant with exhibitions of military maneuvers and bomb-dropping contests.

There will be parachute jumps, glider contests, aerial stunts and other events.

Yesterday marked the end of a "treasure hunt," a zig-zag race of 45 pilots which started in St. Louis on Thursday. The winner was announced as P. F. Sones, of Haines City, Fla. Helen McCloskey, Pittsburgh, was second, followed by Howard Green, Bradford, Pa.; S. L. Burt, Atlanta, and Charles M. Taylor, II, of Little Rock, Ark.

Jack O'Meara, of New York, set a new world glider looping record when he performed 46 loops while descending 8,000 feet to earth. It bettered by 11 loops the former record held by Russell Holderman. O'Meara's flight lasted an hour and 15 minutes.

Sally Rand Just A Sunday School Girl in New York

By DOROTHY ROE
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Chicago may call it indecent exposure, but New York is different, says Sally Rand, the diminutive undressed blonde whose fan dance at the Century of Progress and a Chicago theater won her a record of four arrests and a sentence of one year in prison. She's out on bail now, pending her appeal.

Not a single cop appeared to mar the picture as Sally went into her dance on the stage yesterday afternoon, without benefit of clothes, and afterward Sally explained that no one in his right mind could call her fan dance indecent, and that all her friends back in her Kansas City Sunday school class understood that it was art.

While Sally, all dressed up in a pair of white satin pajamas after her stage apearance, sat in her dressing room, one of her girl friends called up, and they had a good chat about the boys and girls in the Christian Endeavor, after which Sally shook her blonde curls and said:

"I became inspired to do my fan dance while I was modeling for an artist here. Every day as I sat on the model's platform I looked at a lovely picture of Leda and the swan. I wanted to do a dance to interpret it.

"So first I tried it with two huge wings fastened to my arms, and I wore a little costume of feathers. But it wasn't what I wanted.

"I tried all kinds of costumes, and then I realized that the only correct one is what I wear now—just nothing."

Sally isn't a nudist, or anything like that. As a matter of fact, she takes her nude dance most seriously and feels that its artistic significance should be apparent to all.

HUSBAND SHOT, WIFE HELD

Thomas Mulvihill said the woman told them:

"He told me, 'Today is the last day you're going to live.' I became alarmed and tried to quiet him down. He went back to his room. We kept a revolver in a cedar chest. I looked for the gun and found it was gone. I then realized he might carry out his threat to kill me."

Detectives said the woman related how several hours later her husband ate breakfast and returned to his room. He was moaning and raving, according to detectives, and Mrs. Rohrberg went to the room in a second attempt to quiet him. One version of the shooting related that the man was lying in bed with the revolver beside him. The detectives report Mrs. Rohrberg said the revolver was on a dresser top.

As the man tried to grab the weapon, Mrs. Rohrberg struggled with him and the revolver was discharged, police said.

Mrs. Rohrberg had her son summoned from the hospital where he was visiting his wife. He called Ross Township and city police and then took his mother to the Woods Run police.

Hospitals Fear End To Charity Service

HARRISBURG, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Fear that many hospitals may be forced to discontinue free service if the voters defeat the $25,000,000 bond issue at next month's election is expressed by representatives of the State Hospital Association.

KELLY AND WIFE DENY GUILT IN KIDNAPING

Bailey, Bates, Two Others in Urschel Case Get Life

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Kathryn Kelly pleaded not guilty when brought into Federal Court today with other defendants in the Urschel kidnaping case. Her plea came after she had conferred with Judge Edgar S. Vaught in his office. A short time later her husband, George (Machine Gun) Kelly, accused kidnaper of the millionaire oil man, also pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Previously District Attorney Herbert K. Hyde had said Mrs. Kelly would plead guilty with her husband.

Judge Mudge said the kidnaping of the aged banker was "cruel, crude and brutal."

The defendants and their sentences were: Randol Eugene Norville, life imprisonment; Mrs. Lillian Chessen, life; Percy M. Fitzgerald, life; Mike Musiala, 20 years; Christ Nicola Gitcho, five years, and Charles Chessen, five years.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH CONVENTION OPENS WEDNESDAY

4,000 EXPECTED TO ATTEND SESSIONS

Representative members and missionary workers from all parts of the world will begin arriving Monday for the International Convention of the Disciples of Christ, or Christian Church, which opens Wednesday night in Syria Mosque.

Two thousand out-of-town members, augmented by an equal number in the Pittsburgh district, are expected to attend the general sessions to be held in the Mosque and Soldiers' Memorial Hall.

The Rev. Dr. George A. Campbell, of St. Louis, president of the convention, will deliver the opening address Wednesday night.

GROUP MEETINGS

Numerous group meetings are scheduled, including an assembly of ministers' wives and a reunion banquet in the William Penn Hotel of those who attended the centennial convention in Pittsburgh in 1909.

Among the important matters expected to come up is a preliminary report of the Commission to Restudy the Convention, of which the Rev. Dr. F. W. Burnham, of Richmond, Va., is chairman. Many adherents are said to favor a delegate convention with more authority than is now vested in the assembly. At present all members who attend are entitled to vote.

MISSION PROBLEMS

The proposed elimination of several activities from the United Christian Missionary Society, in which are centered all missionary and benevolent enterprises, also is expected to receive attention.

All matters of business presented are first heard by the committee on recommendations, with representatives from the various states. F. J. Riebel, of Bellevue is one of four members from Pennsylvania.

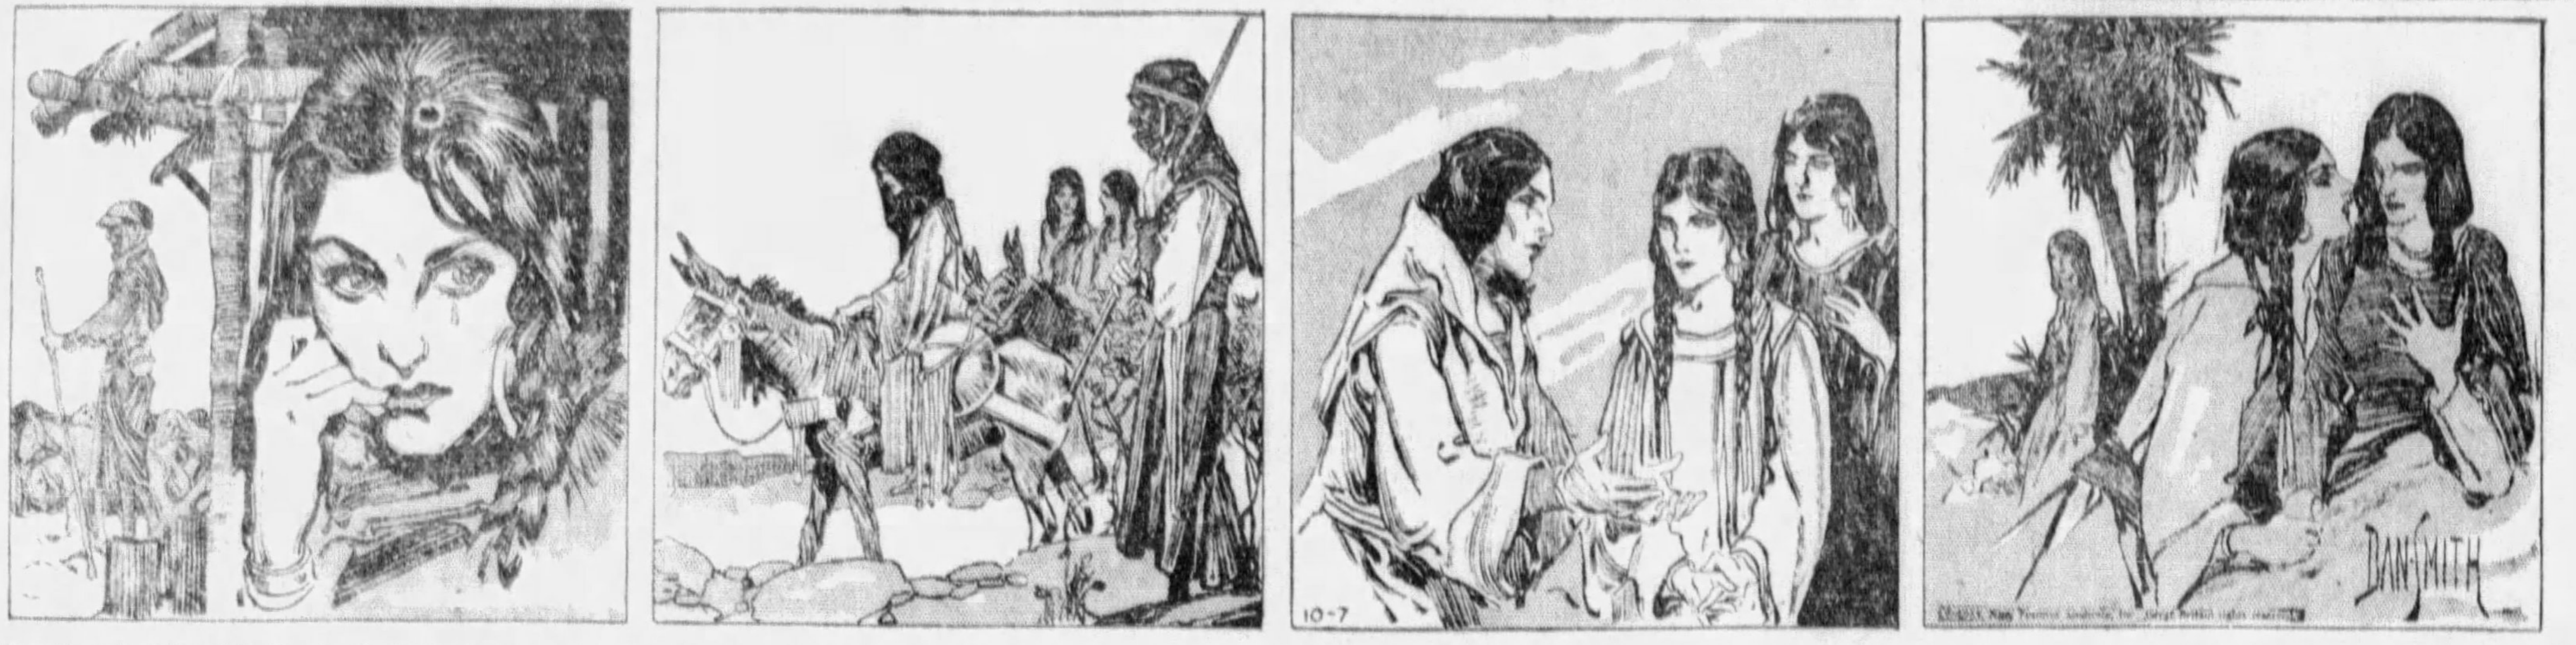
The Story of Ruth -:- CHAPTER II -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith



After they had lived in the land of Moab for ten years, both Mahlon and Chilion died and were laid to rest; and of those of the household of Elimelech who had come out of Judah because of the famine, only Naomi, their mother, was left.

Then Naomi arose with her daughters-in-law, Orpah and Ruth, and made ready to go with them out of the land of Moab to her own country, for she had learned that the Lord had visited his people in the land of Judah in giving them bread.

But when they were on their way to the land of Judah, Naomi besought Orpah and Ruth to return each to the house of her own mother; and she kissed them and said, "And the Lord deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with the dead and with me."

Then Orpah bade Naomi farewell and returned to her own mother in Moab. But Ruth clave to Naomi and said, "For whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God."

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Admiral Byrd, on the radio last night, brought back memories of his trip to Pittsburgh following his last expedition into little America. At that time he said he was going back and finish the job he had started.

He was fooling, but it gave me a thrill when he asked me how I would like to go along. The thrill changed to a chill in the next moment when he continued over the microphone with stories of temperatures 60 and 70 degrees below zero.

Don't they explore the South Sea Islands any more?

Where do all these pigeons come from that get forced down in strange surroundings? J. A. Welsh, of Winterburn street, has No. 8 U 33 Buffalo, 782.

* * *

M. J. Gillespie's pointers are very much appreciated. Don't forget, people, good ideas are most welcome.

* * *

Oakland's oldest resident celebrates her ninety-third birthday today. She is Mrs. Amelia Schoenberger, of 302 Bouquet street. She has lived in Oakland 91 years. Her husband fell during the Civil War in the Battle of the Wilderness.

* * *

Just for a change from so much squab on the menu, here is turtle soup or it may be if some one doesn't keep his turtle from wandering around the neighborhood. Mrs. R., of 328 Matthew street, found one presumably racing rabbits in her yard. It answers to the name of "Gumbo."

Bernie, Baker May Take Up Sport Work

By AIRCASTER

He was once a newspaperman himself. That may account for some of the bizarre notions cherished by John Royal, the NBC vice president, charged with the job of entertaining you and you and me.

His newest ambition is to put a kick in sports broadcasting. Much of its wallop, he fears, is being lost in the haze of technical terms used by the expert observers.

Doubtless, Royal has been poring over the journalistic textbooks. There is one old lesson which warns the journalist that if he wants a good account of a thrilling ride in a locomotive, he mustn't entrust it to an engineer, who'll bore you stiff with technical narrative.

The sensible thing to do is to assign to the job a man who never has ridden an iron horse. His story will interest the laity.

* * *

Fresh Viewpoint

Sports announcers face and frequently succumb to the temptation to indulge in their own vernacular.

A novice at the field mike is certain to be entertaining, even if he, like a famous singer, who recently covered a horse race, has the wrong nag winning, or describes a college youth fighting toward the wrong goal.

There's bound to be a fresh viewpoint, Royal opines, and everything is quite certain to turn out all right if the novice is backed by expert coaching and a personality of his own.

Therefore, Royal is plotting to assign to the forthcoming gridiron events such more or less entertaining commentators as Ben Bernie, Sigmund Spaeth, the tune detective; Paul Whiteman and Phil Baker.

One hopes the expedient works more satisfactorily than its reverse—Husing and Bill Munday warbling or leading orchestras.

* * *

Strutting Gypsy

If you spot a ruddy-cheeked lad strutting along the street with his head in the air, and chest expanded, and with gaze fixed on the clouds, go right up to him and say, Hello, Harry Horlick, you old leader of the Gypsies."

The new Horlick pose is traceable to a medal pinned on the musical chest by Rufus Dawes, president of the Chicago fair, who presented the medallion to the band leader for "giving the finest dance and concert music" to the fair patrons.

Horlick, say the records, played to 6,858,976 people in Chi, not counting freaks and fan dancers.

Almost Perfect Crime On Air Tonight

Pittsburgh, Wheeling and Fairmont radio stations present "The Almost Perfect Crime," story of a skillfully plotted murder in which the murderer almost, but not quite, successfully covered his tracks.

Jack Roseleigh, famous for his role of Capt. Flagg in "What Price Glory," plays the leading part in the drama, adapted from a feature story in tomorrow's American Weekly Magazine, distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

The dramatization is heard on the following stations this evening: WWVA, Wheeling, 5:45; WMMN, Fairmont, 7, and WCAE, 7:45 p. m.

RETURN BOARD WORK NEARS COMPLETION

The return board working under the County Commissioners today was expected to finish transcribing the results of the primary election. By Tuesday the county totals results will be completed and made public.

Director William T. Reese, of the Bureau of Elections, who has been supervising the work, said the results would be certified to the Secretary of the Commonwealth in mid-week.

Albert C. Staley, of Dormont, who in unofficial returns had apparently lost the Republican nomination for borough council by a half dozen votes, passed Arthur L. Miller in the official count yesterday and won one of the four places by a single vote. Staley's official total was 1,298, and Miller's 1,297.

Earl Llewelyn, Charles Cooke and Elmer Evans received the other Republican nominations in Dormont.

In Castle Shannon the official count showed Walter Riehl and Thomas Carney tied with 99 votes each for the Democratic nomination for burgess. Riehl already had clinched the Republican nomination.

Carney and Riehl were summoned before the return board. To decide the tie, they tossed the "pill." Carney won, and is the Democratic nominee. The rivals shook hands and left the return room together.

Wall Street's Cats and Dogs Scratch and Bark

By ARTHUR (Bugs) BAER

Just heard where some investment bankers knocked off a profit of 26,000 per cent on cats and dogs.

Cats and dogs are stocks that scratch when you hold 'em and bark when you try to sell 'em.

A profit of 26,000 per cent is better than a license to steal. When they sell you stuff like that it beats indorsing autumn leaves for widows and orphans.

We may be a little wrong about the percentage as we figured it out with our finger on a subway window. The stock was worth twenty cents and sold for fifty-two dollars.

Try it yourself. No matter what result you get you will be all right provided you don't get the stock.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Don't you feel like walking on these crisp autumn days? This is a grand time of year for you, fellows, to go on hikes. Get your Junior Patrol Club together, pack a lunch, and head for the open.

While you're out, have a nature study contest. It's great fun to see how many birds and leaves you can identify. Then, too, there are lots of games you can play—fox hunt, using pieces of paper to show the trail, and ball games of all sorts.

If you live in the city, take a street car to the country or go to one of the parks such as Schenley, Riverview or Frick. There's plenty of room in them for all you Junior Patrol members to hike and picnic.

Eleven pledges from Cresson, Pa. Fine work! The new members are Lewis Shrader, Thomas Filer, Richard Sabation, Cecil Bennet, Charles Lockwood, Morris Myers, Howard Snow, Billy Henderson, John Bakovitch, James Fix and Billy Hillman. The next thing in line for you, fellows, is to organize and elect a captain. After that you'll be all set to have a regular club program.

Virginia Cortese, in Coraopolis, Pa., is interested especially in our radio programs. She writes:

"I would like to become a member of the Junior Patrol. I read the Mail Box every day and enjoy it.

"I can play the piano and would like to know if I can come in to the studio and try out for the orchestra."

Would we like to have you, Dorothy? Absolutely! Just try us and see.

BONDS TO FREE FROZEN ASSETS IN BANKS

By JOHN P. COWAN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Representative Henry Ellenbogen announced today that, through action by the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, conservators of restricted national banks will be allowed to accept Home Owners Loan Corporation bonds.

At the same time Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor modified a recent ruling to conform to the new plan, thereby releasing millions of dollars' worth of frozen assets and saving the homes of thousands of persons throughout the country.

Representative Ellenbogen explained the plan thus:

John Smith has a mortgage of $5,000 on his home and is unable to pay. The mortgage is held by a restricted bank.

John Smith applies for a home owners loan consent form. The conservator, through O'Connor's new ruling will sign the form of consent of mortgagee, examine the title and prepare the papers.

John Smith will give a new mortgage to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and the corporation will give $5,000 in bonds plus the accrued interest to the conservator. In turn the conservator will issue a two-year note for $4,000, being 80 per cent of the principal, and taking this to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation with the bonds as collateral, will receive $4,000.

Thus the conservator will transfer $5,000 in frozen assets to $4,000 in liquid assets, while the home owner will have 15 years in which to pay the mortgage of $5,000.

Prudence Penny is still paying $15 in cash awards for favorite home recipes. If you have one or more that you are proud of, mail them to Prudence Penny, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., today and it will be judged by experts. HERE COMES THE BRIDE!

Regal Gowns Trail to the Altar

By PRUNELLA WOOD

ALL the world loves a lover—and what a lot of midnight oil the designers must have spent in behalf of the October bride's wedding gown this year! For it's quite a problem couturieres are faced with when it comes to bridal robes; they have to stay within the bounds of centuries of ritual while providing some detailing that spells modern sophistication.

They have had a very successful bout with their opportunities this season. The general trend toward costumes of elegance and distinction is all on the bride's side to start with (which puts thumbs down on the organza and picture hat bride for the nonce) and there are a lot of new fabrics to enslave, in the second place.

* * *

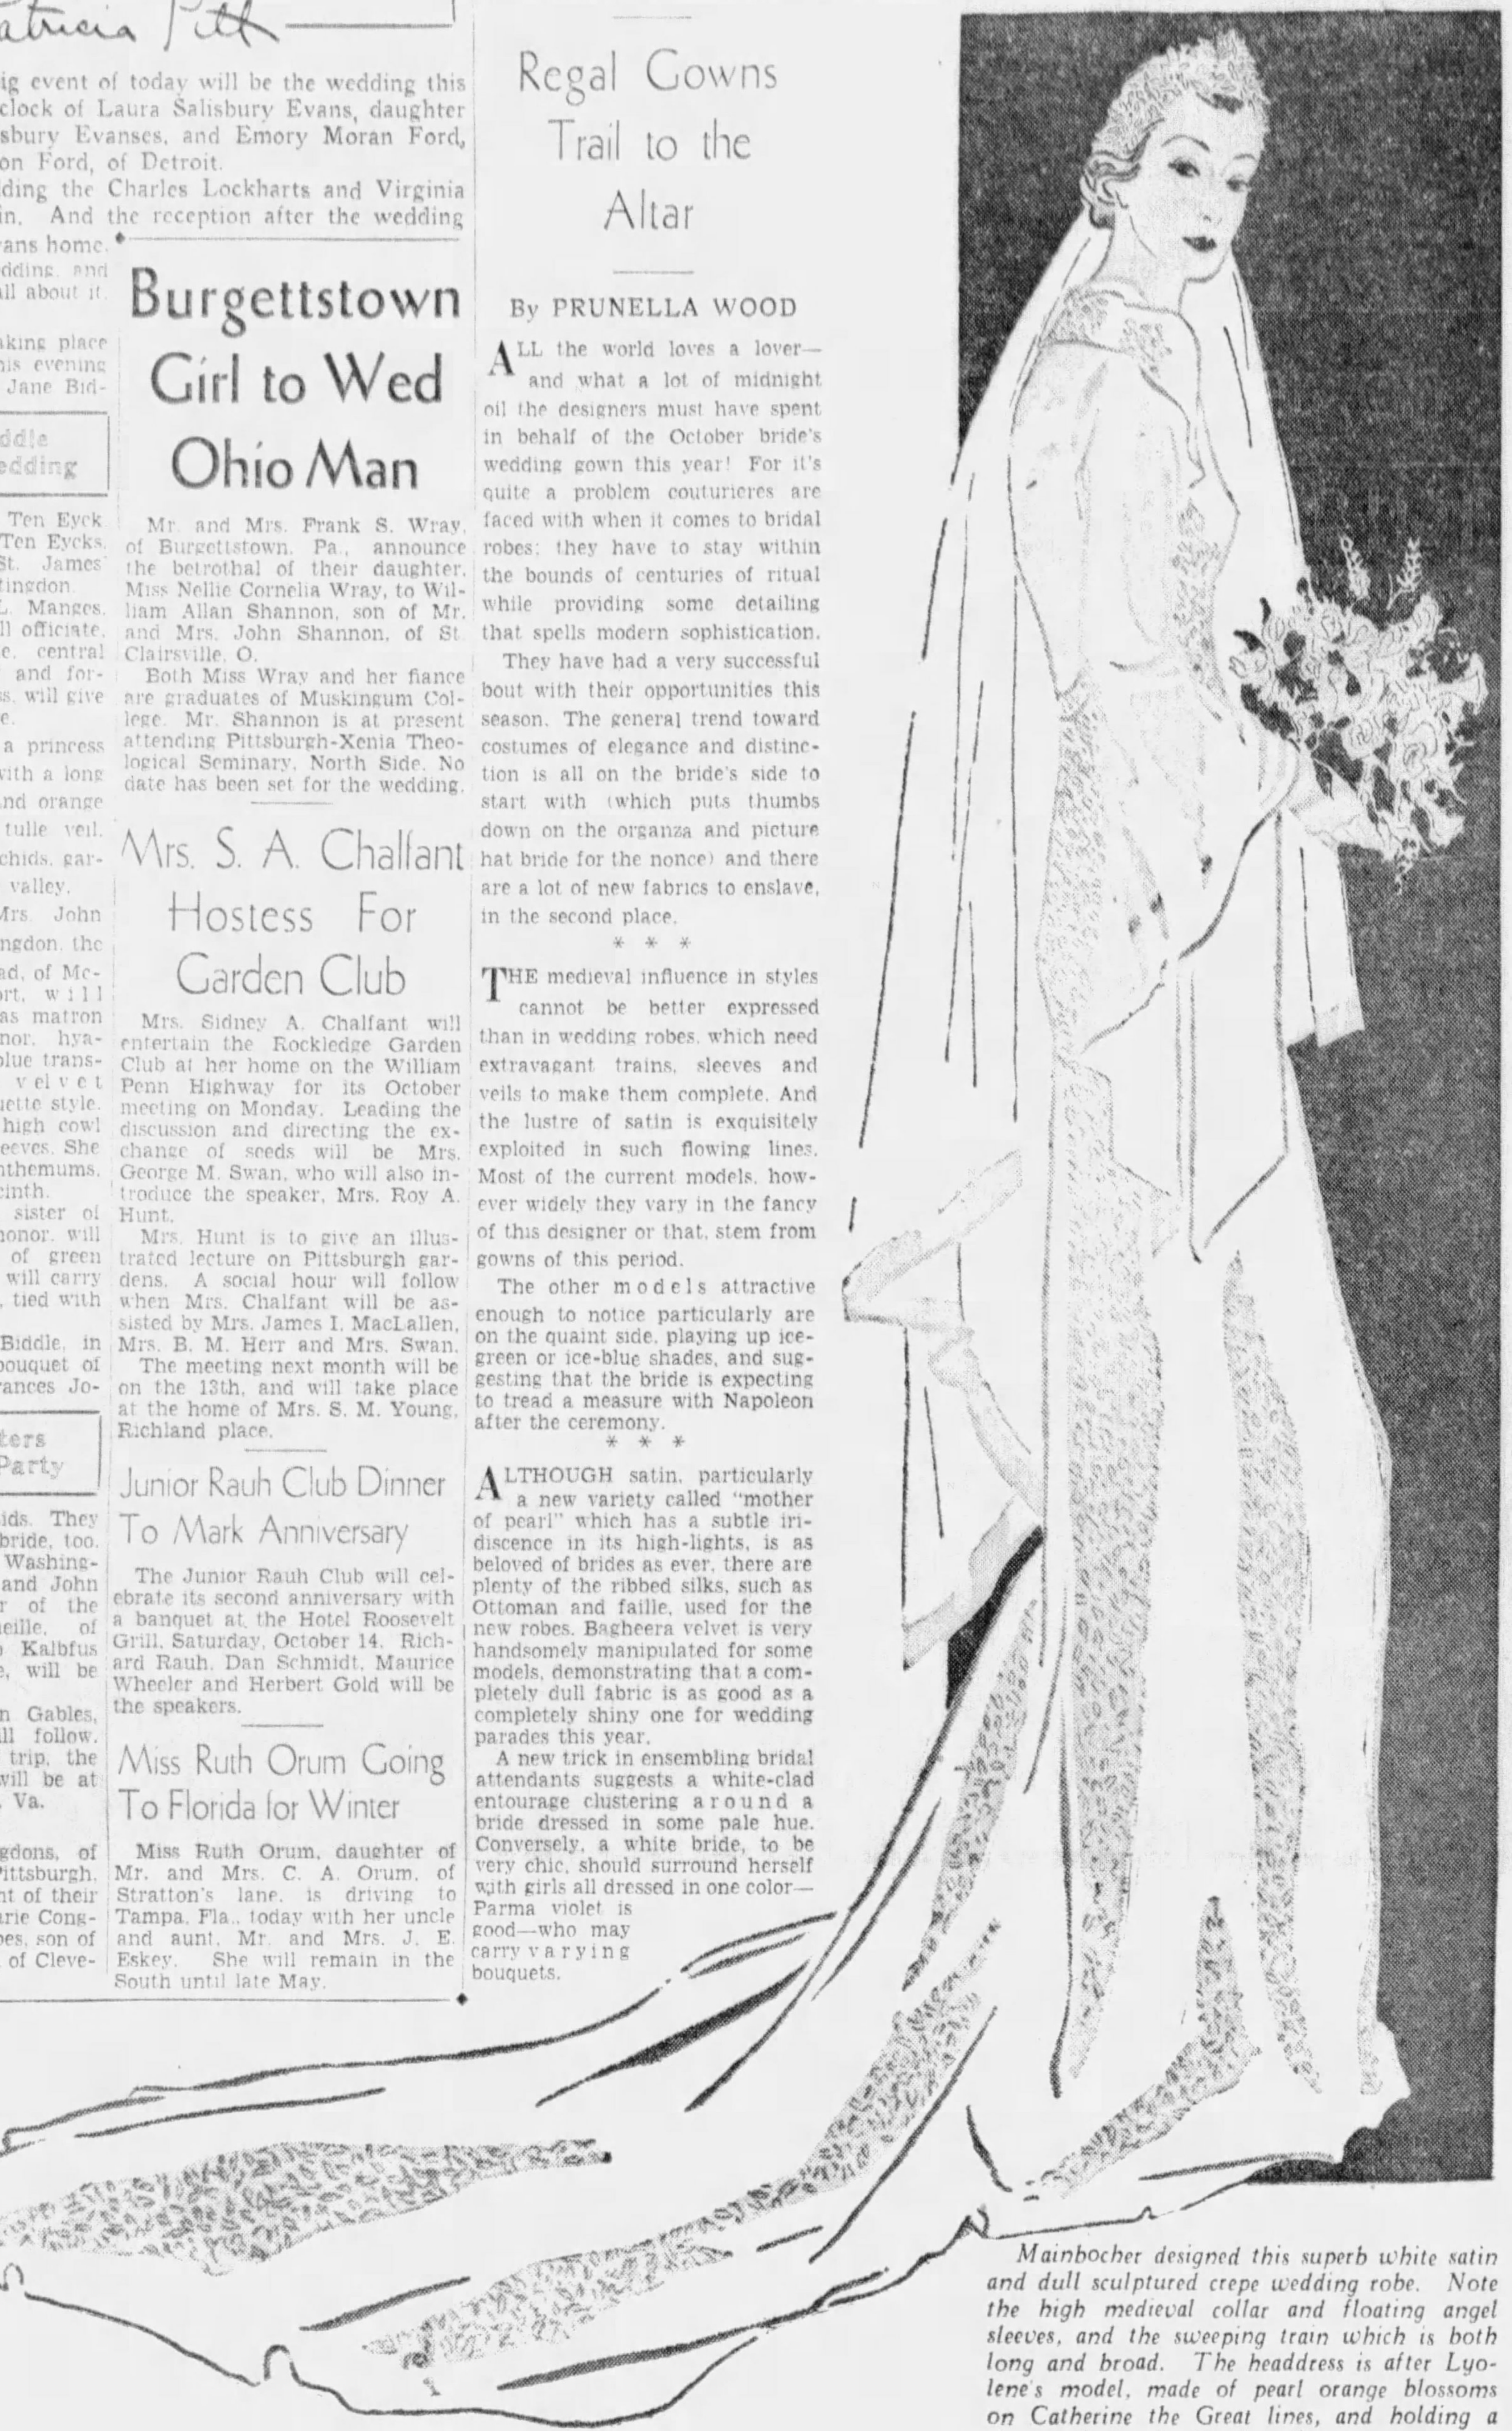
THE medieval influence in styles cannot be better expressed than in wedding robes, which need extravagant trains, sleeves and veils to make them complete. And the lustre of satin is exquisitely exploited in such flowing lines. Most of the current models, however widely they vary in the fancy of this designer or that, stem from gowns of this period.

The other models attractive enough to notice particularly are on the quaint side, playing up ice-green or ice-blue shades, and suggesting that the bride is expecting to tread a measure with Napoleon after the ceremony.

* * *

ALTHOUGH satin, particularly a new variety called "mother of pearl" which has a subtle iridiscence in its high-lights, is as beloved of brides as ever, there are plenty of the ribbed silks, such as Ottoman and faille, used for the new robes. Bagheera velvet is very handsomely manipulated for some models, demonstrating that a completely dull fabric is as good as a completely shiny one for wedding parades this year.

A new trick in ensembling bridal attendants suggests a white-clad entourage clustering around a bride dressed in some pale hue. Conversely, a white bride, to be very chic, should surround herself with girls all dressed in one color—Parma violet is good—who may carry varying bouquets.



Mainbocher designed this superb white satin and dull sculptured crepe wedding robe. Note the high medieval collar and floating angel sleeves, and the sweeping train which is both long and broad. The headdress is after Lyolene's model, made of pearl orange blossoms on Catherine the Great lines, and holding a short satin-bordered tulle veil.

TELL IT TO ELSIE -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By ELSIE ROBINSON

Same Youngster Shouldn't Be Given All Favors

Should brothers pay the old folks as much board as sisters?

Should they help as hard to keep the home fires burning?

What's this—another family squabble? No, something much bigger. It's a red hot problem in thousands of homes. And many another girl will believe, with Ann, that "sisters need a New Deal."

So, whether you're a sister or a brother—or maybe another Mom who's "playing favorites"—it will pay you to listen in.

Dear Miss Robinson:

I am a daily reader of your column, and now I have a little problem of my own. Maybe you'll think it is too trivial to bother, but I'd sure like to hear you "sound off" on it.

This problem is "Board and Room Bill."

Briefly, my brother and I both earn the same monthly salary, and both of us enjoy a fine home, with about the finest parents on this earth. But here's my "beef":

My brothers' board bill is $10 a month less than mine, and since we both have like incomes and share like advantages, I don't seem to grasp the fairness of this.

I am not trying to hold out on the old folks, you understand. I realize they haven't much money, and I want to do my part all right. But it does seem that we kids ought to be on the same basis when it comes to paying our board.

QUESTIONS FAIRNESS

My brother is one year younger than I am, and I previously earned more money, but Old Man Depression dented my salary for a $20 a month loss.

Now I wish you would tell me, if you think I am mean for bringing this up. Maybe I am all wrong. But I can't honestly see why my brother's responsibility shouldn't be the same as mine, even if he is younger.

My mother "feels sorry for him," because it costs him so much to maintain his car, but I can't see why that should make any difference when it comes to him carrying his obligations. He has the car for his own personal pleasure, and I think that if he can afford a car he can, or should, also afford to pay for his keep, the same as I do. What do you think? Ann.

EVADING OBLIGATION

I think you're right, Ann. Why should he be allowed to duck out of his rightful obligations, merely because he has a taste for gadding on wheels? You might just as well plead to be let off because you need money for beauty treatments or new "formals." No. It isn't fair to you; nor is it, in the long run, fair to him.

Of course I can see Mom's viewpoint. He is her Baby, and she wants to make things easy for him. But making things too easy for youngsters is the best possible way to make tramps of them. If he is allowed to welch on this debt, he'll feel he can welch on others—and mom's doing him no favor by robbing him of his honesty and self-respect.

If your brother is capable of holding down a job and of making the same salary you do, he should be man enough to pay for his keep the same as you do. And if the Old Folks let him get to expecting all the Special Breaks, the world will kick him around plenty when he has to go out on his own.

That's my slant on How Much Should Brothers Pay.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

An Unusual Squeeze Play

Most examples of the squeeze, or forced unguarding, play deal with positions in which Declarer leads out an established suit until his adversaries must release a stopper in a suit of which he holds a low card which would otherwise be a loser. These positions can be classified as "notrump squeezes" because, even though there was a trump suit originally, it plays no more part toward the execution of the play than if it were simply a set-up suit at notrump.

A characteristic of the notrump squeeze is that Declarer must have the master card of at least one of the suits in which he has establishable low cards. This necessity is due to the fact that there must be an entry to any low card which may be established. Many times, when playing at a trump contract, even a skilful player does not realize that it is possible to substitute a trump for the master card which would otherwise be lacking. I have seen men, who automatically recognize the notrump type of squeeze, play out all their trumps in a futile try at a pseudo-squeeze, saying sadly, "If I had held the high diamond (or spade or heart or club, as the case may be) in this hand, I could have made the bid." Yet they could have retained a small trump, and transformed it into, let us say, the "Super-Ace" of the important suit; and presto: all the elements of the squeeze would have been available to them.

The knowledge of this principle proved to be of great value to me when I played the following hand:

East, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ A 8 4 ♡ 9 7 2 ◇ J 8 5 3 ♣ K Q 7
♠ 9 7 ♡ 10 5 3 ◇ 7 4 2 ♣ 10 8 6 5 4	North West East South	♠ K Q 10 5 2 ♡ Q 4 ◇ A K Q 9 ♣ J 2
	♠ J 6 3 ♡ A K J 8 6 ◇ 10 6 ♣ A 9 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
			1♠
2♡	Pass	2NT	Pass
3♡	Pass	4♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the spade 9, and I played small from Dummy to avoid the immediate establishment of two spade tricks against me. East won the spade Queen and took the King and Queen of diamonds. He now led a club to escape the burden of leading.

I won with the club Ace in my own hand, played the Ace of hearts to see if the Queen would drop, and then led a club to Dummy's Queen, intended to finesse for the heart Queen; but it fell on the next heart lead, and I won the King and Knave of hearts, exhausing the adverse trumps. I played the heart 8, and on this I discarded from Dummy not a small diamond, but the spade 8, blanking Dummy's Ace! I had not overlooked the fact that my heart 6, being a high trump, represented the master card—the Super-Ace—of diamonds, which made East's diamond Ace no more than a secondary stopper which he would be unable to guard. The situation was now as follows:

	♠ A ♡ — ◇ J 8 ♣ K
♠ 7 ♡ — ◇ 7 ♣ 10 8	North West East South	♠ K 10 ♡ — ◇ A 9 ♣ —
	♠ J 6 ♡ 6 ◇ — ♣ 9

At this point I led a club to Dummy's King; and East could not save himself. If he threw a diamond, I would lead a diamond from Dummy, dropping his Ace, and ruff in my hand; then return to Dummy's spade Ace to cash the diamond Knave. If he threw a spade, I would first lead the spade Ace from Dummy, dropping his King, and return to my hand by ruffing a diamond to cash the spade Knave.

I could not have executed this play by leading out all my trumps; East could have chosen his discards after I had discarded from Dummy, and thus he would have avoided the squeeze. It was important that I should have the true perspective on the value of that little trump; if we never lose sight of the fact that little trumps are better than the Aces of other suits we shall find new possibilities in the play opening to us.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Kindly advise me the proper response to the following Double:

West holds:

♠ Q 9 6 ♡ K 10 3 ◇ 9 8 7 4 ♣ 10 9 7

Answer: West should bid two diamonds—his only four-card suit:

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

It is a mistake to believe that peroxide of hydrogen will destroy superfluous hair, it won't. It merely bleaches is so that it isn't such a strain on the eye when the eye glances in to the mirror. Pour a tablespoon of peroxide into a saucer, add two drops of household ammonia—that speeds up the bleaching process—and apply with a piece of cotton. Put on twice a day for several days. If the ammonia makes the skin sensitive, rub in cold cream afterward.

Beware of the middle parting, the light bang, and curls at the sides. This arrangement of the glorious crown makes the pate look flat. Dispense with the bang, slap down the side locks and all is well. The girl with the tall, long head should place her curls at the back midway between nape and crown. That trick cuts the back of the head into two portions, helps create an appearance of width. Girls with round phizes must wear the hair at the sides neither full nor sleeked back, but betwixt and between.

The painted coiffure made a sensation, then fizzled. The hair was waved and dressed, a coloring substance applied, a fixative sprayed on. Next day, the coloring agent had to be removed by the hairdreseser, since it wouldn't wash out with soap and water. Women are interested in such innovations, but few have time for a two-day session at the beautery. And there is the matter of the beauty overhead, which is plenty, since the glorious crest is now shampooed and finger waved every week, and two or three permanents a year are necessary to keep tress ends ringleted.

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

16 yrs. old.
26 yrs. old.
Hans Andersen Fairy Tales
1.9.3.3.

The drama of the Doll. The first one that a girl's heart—a small heart then, but warm as ever it is later—dotes upon, is an unreal creature, but so loved, so brooded upon. Her eyes lift and fall languidly. She "goes to sleep," with eyelashes twice too long. Her cheeks are of the feel of kid gloves and too round and too pink. Her mouth, to a boy both young and old, is slightly insipid, for all it's perfection of shape. Her hair is of the luxuriance of an animal's fur and curled to distraction. Her legs and arms bend, and creak as they bend, but the small girl does not mind that.

The second doll is even more than an unreal creature. She is weird, not of this earth. But colorful, decorative, and the girl likes her on her rose-colored bed. Her eyes are shaded with green, her lips are orange, such slender legs and arms were never flung about by any but her kind. Her hair is silver silk. But the girl does not mind that.

The third. The real one. Round eyes that move too—but the eyelashes are scarcely at all—and the expression that is there! Perfect mouth, cheeks not too pink. Legs and arms that move madly—but do NOT creak—as poor Delphine's did. Hands that clutch and hold and make havoc of a girl's coiffure—but a girl doesn't care. Hair that is heavenly silk, and, ah, how a girl a million times a day touches it delicately with her fingertips and palms. A doll that takes time by the clockful and never leaves any for anything but itself. But a girl doesn't mind that, for the nicest Doll of all. —NELL BRINKLEY.

Exposure of "Poverty" Story Would Thwart Scheme

I felt suddenly tired, as if I had been running a race, when Avis Arlen said "Goodby." Hugh put out a hand to restrain me when I would have risen from the chair where I had been sitting during my colloquy with the girl, who, I feared, meant mischief to Mary and Noel if she could compass it.

"Don't move for a little," he said. "You are positively colorless. You were too tired for any such session as the girl has given you. I should have tackled her myself. Now you are not to stir until you have some tea."

He clapped his hands, and in a few seconds a Chinese servant appeared in the doorway. Hugh spoke to him rapidly in his own tongue, and the man made a bow which was almost an obeisance and vanished through the curtains. Hugh turned back to me.

"No, relax!" he commanded, smiling. "The doctor orders it. When you have had your tea you may go home, but not a minute sooner."

"You do not see any rebellion to that dictum, do you?" I asked him, with an answering smile. "A cup of your tea would tempt me were I fresh as the dawn, instead of being really quite fagged as you have suspected."

OFFERS ADVICE

"As I know," Hugh said gravely, and something in his eyes gave me to understand that he was able to conjugate my moods and tenses because he had studied them carefully.

"While I am waiting," I said hastily, unwilling to stray farther in that particular conversational direction, "may I not tell you what Miss Arlen said?"

"If you are not too tired," he answered quickly. "I gathered a great deal of it, you know, from what you said."

"I know you must have done so," I returned, "but I should like so much to tell you all about it, and I am not too tired for that."

"Very well," he said, leaning his head against the back of his chair, placing his arms upon those of the chair and putting his fingertips together—a pose which I knew from experience meant that he was giving the matter before him his closest attention. "I am listening. Go ahead!"

I told him all of the conversation, and by hurrying through it I was able to finish by the time the tea came in. Hugh made no comment until we had been served and the Chinese had left, then he lifted a tea cup that would have graced a museum and made as if to drink a toast.

"Drink your tea," he said, "and then I'll give you some sound advice."

I obeyed him gladly, and he inexorably kept me eating and drinking until I had swallowed three cups of that delicious tea and eaten several of the Chinese cakes, such cakes as I never have seen in any restaurant, or indeed anywhere except in Hugh's menage.

"Now," he said at last, "I'll tell you only what you knew before. This Arlen person is a dangerous little snake. You'll have to keep a sharp lookout for her, not only on Mary's account, but your own. Please remember, however, that I'm behind you, and I have resources which I shall set in motion."

"I don't believe I understand," I said in truth, and genuinely puzzled.

"I mean," he said sturdily, "that I am going to find out the truth concerning this apparent poverty of hers. I can do it, with a little trouble, and if what I conjecture is true you will have another handle by which you can control her."

TO TRANSFER CALL

"I feel like a blackmailer," I said pettishly.

"But what holy blackmail!" he retorted, smiling. "However, it is nothing of the sort. Now, here is another question I want you to consider. Suppose Mr. Veritzen, when he receives the report of his spy—you may be very sure that ferret-faced chap will go straight to his employer with the report of what he saw at Patchogue, regardless of the promises he made the gullible Miss Arlen—suppose, I say, that Mr. Veritzen calls you up at the farm house about it. Won't the fat be in the fire, as far as your mother-in-law is concerned?"

I looked at him in dismay.

"I never thought of that," I faltered. What am I to do?"

"Do you know your local telephone operator very well?" he asked. "Sometimes these girls in the small town exchanges are helpful neighbors."

"This particular one is a dear," I said. "She would do anything she could to help me out."

"Then may I suggest that you tell her that your mother-in-law is quite nervous, and that you do not wish to disturb her with a long distance call you are expecting. Ask her, in case Mr. Veritzen or Miss Arlen calls, to switch the call on here. That is, of course, if the call comes in within the next half hour. I do not suppose you would care to stay longer than that."

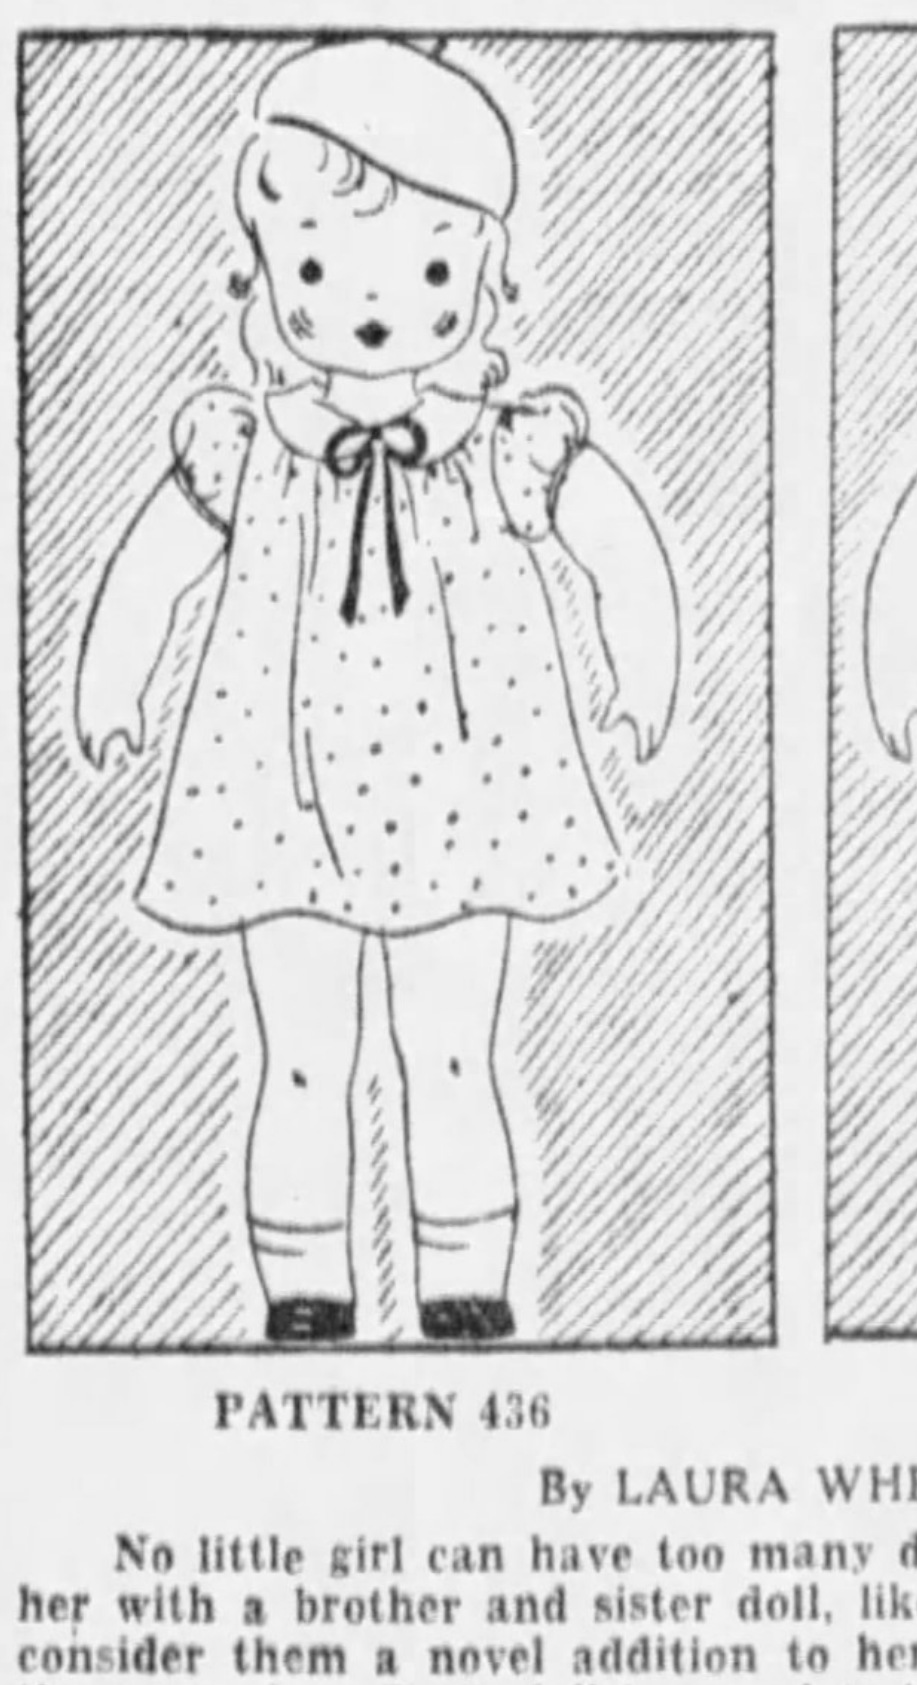
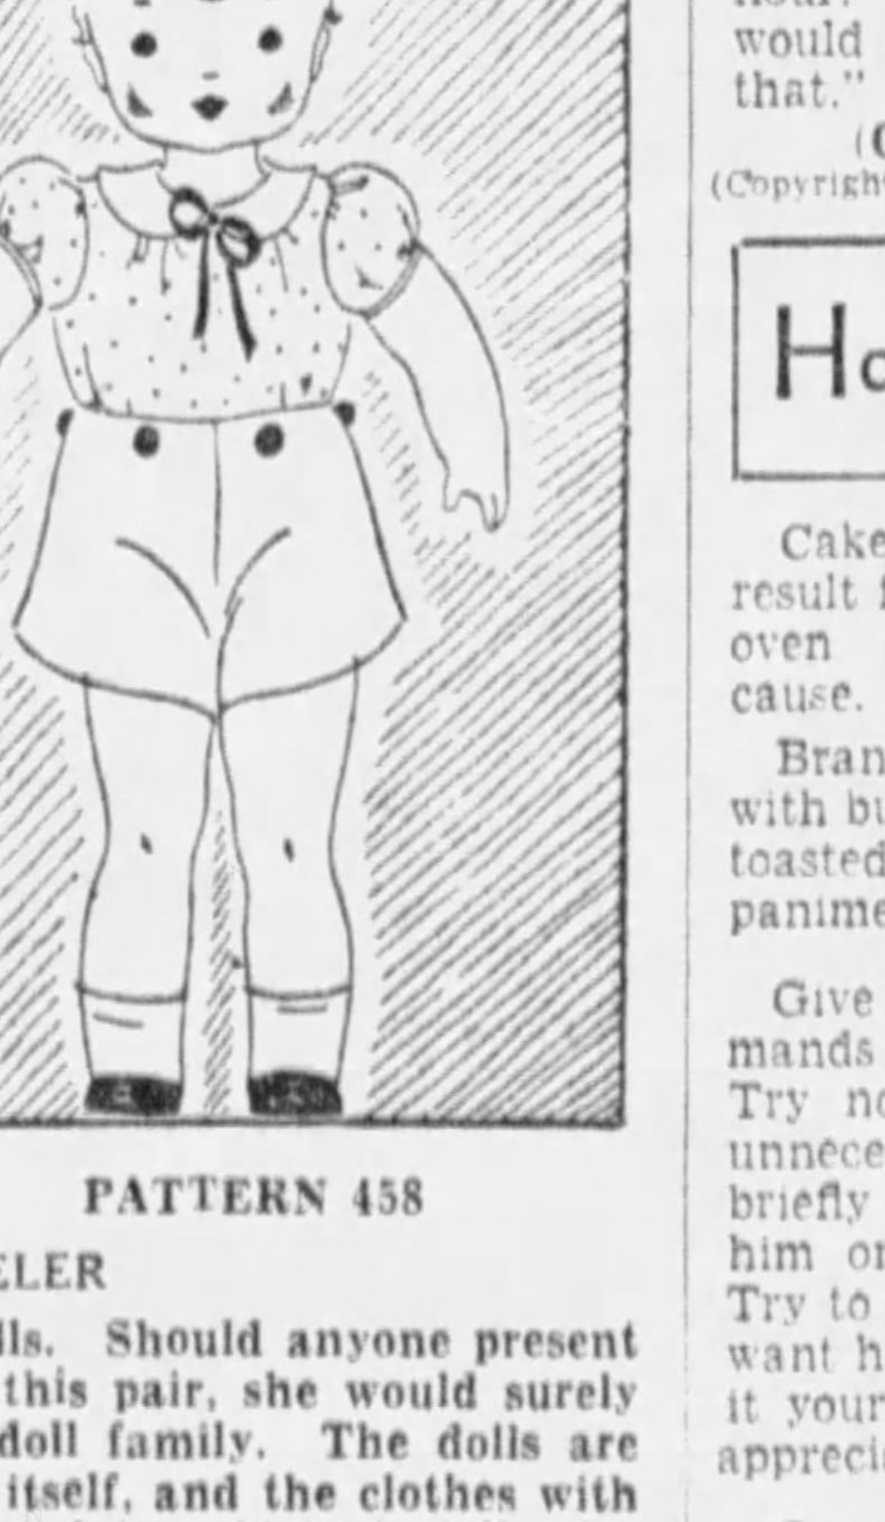
THESE DOLLS ARE FUN TO SEW



PATTERN 436



PATTERN 458

By LAURA WHEELER

No little girl can have too many dolls. Should anyone present her with a brother and sister doll, like this pair, she would surely consider them a novel addition to her doll family. The dolls are the same size. Each doll is complete in itself, and the clothes with each of the dolls are designed to fit a regulation 14-inch doll. So, here is a chance to make some little girl happy by adding to her doll's wardrobe! The dolls, or the clothes alone, would make a donation to the church fair that would be a bit different—and certainly popular.

Each pattern contains a transfer pattern of the doll, a pattern for the clothes, as well as directions for making the doll and the clothes, and illustrated directions for attaching yarn hair in a haircomb suitable for each doll. Either doll may be ordered separately. Price of each pattern 10 cents; 20 cents for both.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

World Still Combatting Smallpox

For many centuries smallpox served as a stumbling block to human progress. It caused more deaths than any other disease of mankind.

Dr. Copeland

In 1796 Edward Jenner, a young English physician, discovered that vaccination against smallpox would prevent the disease. Jenner became interested in this work by the remark of a milkmaid, who said, "I cannot take smallpox because I have had cowpox."

By a series of carefully studied and supervised experiments, Jenner convinced the unbelieving world that a person who had the mild disease called cowpox would be protected against smallpox. This was indeed a great gift to humanity and a contribution that cannot be overestimated in value.

Before vaccination was discovered, only about five persons out of every hundred escaped smallpox. About 25 per cent of those who contracted the disease died and the remainder were mutilated or maimed for life. It was an affliction feared all over the globe.

In this age of scientific understanding, it is almost unbelievable that anyone would deny himself the benefit of vaccinaton. Yet many persons are deprived of this protective measure because they follow mistaken and unscientific advice.

Though the disease is no longer a common one, it is still prevalent throughout the world. In the United States during a period of ten years, more than half a million cases of smallpox have been reported. This record is made possible by reason of inadequate vaccination.

The disease can be prevented by vaccination and only in that manner. This is confirmed by the fact that in countries where vaccination is compulsory, the disease does not exist.

It is the advice of all authorities that before reaching its first birthday, a baby should be vaccinated against smallpox. An infant may be vaccinated as early as the sixth month. It is a safe procedure and need cause no alarm.

Bear in mind that without warning and at any time, smallpox may break out in your community. If you and your children are vaccinated against smallpox, there is no need for worry.

I am often asked how long vaccination will protect against smallpox. Vaccination is believed to give protection for a period of seven years. I would advise that all children be vaccinated before entering school, after graduation and every seven years thereafter.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

May I take this opportunity to express to you my sincere appreciation of the informative value of your column, feeling, as I do, that I derive much benefit therefrom and to tell you that I follow it faithfully each day.

When I ask a young lady to go out with me, is it proper for me to ask another couple, whom the young lady has never met, to go along without first consulting her as to her wishes in the matter? NED.

Welcome to the column, dear sir, and thank you, most heartily for your good and friendly words of appreciation.

The gracious thing to do, and the thing that the young lady would justifiably expect you to do, is to ask her first, telephone her, if your plan to invite another couple will be agreeable to her. Of course it will be, but it is mannerly of you to ask her just the same. And she will very much admire this thoughtfulness on your part. We all love this kind of courtly attention, as you know, women and men alike.

Arranging for a Baptism

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

As I am a stranger here, I would like your help on the following question:

1—I wish to have my babe baptized in the Episcopal Church, and I would like to know if I could make arrangements for this over the telephone, or would a personal call at the rectory be necessary?

2—Would a fee of $1 be sufficient to offer the minister, and, if so, when is this presented? H.

1—This question of the baptism of your baby is such an important and significant one that it requires a personal call to consult with the clergyman. I wouldn't like to have him think that you regarded it as so casual that a telephone call would do. If it is really impossible for you to call at the rectory, I suggest that you write a note to the clergyman, explaining this to him, and ask him if it would be convenient for him to come to see you or to have his assistant come to see you. I am sure that he would thoroughly understand this. This personal call, either at the rectory or at your home, is especially important since you are a newcomer to this city.

2—The amount of your fee to the clergyman is entirely a question of circumstances, but don't hesitate to offer a small sum if this represents your "honest mite." Indeed, the church and the clergyman would understand if you explain that it is difficult for you to offer any fee to the church.

The fee is given after the baptismal ceremony has been performed.

IRVIN S. COBB, noted American humorist and philosopher, writes: "For a change, let's try seeing if we can refrain, each and everyone of us, from paying so much unsolicited attention to what properly does not concern us in the lives and habits of the rest of humanity. For lack of a better title, I call it 'A Plan to Reform the Professional Reformers.'"

DR. JULIUS CURTIUS, former foreign Minister of Germany, says from Berlin: "It is not necessary to be a weather forecaster to predict that this depression will influence world politics for a long time," but, he adds: "People will no longer be satisfied with mere promises."

MARY BORDEN, noted author, in another signed article, asserts: "Many marriages start wrong because of the honeymoon—often an unfair test of a couple's love for each other."

CAPT. VON RINTELEN, officer of the German Admiralty Staff, discloses how he once planned to blow up "Black Tom" munitions and how fire bombs destroyed allied steamers in mid-ocean.

MAJOR-GENERAL SMEDLEY D. BUTLER, retired officer of the United States Marine Corps, urges that we build up the nation by more athletics—that "a healthier, stronger, more graceful, better disciplined people would result."

GEORGE F. ZOOK, United States Commissioner of Education, discusses the depression crisis in the public schools, resulting in hundreds of thousands of children being deprived of education.

VERNON W. HOWE, in a second article, describes how Pope Pius XI is putting the Vatican in closer touch with the outer world.

Sonnet

And so you take from me my peace of mind
By day, and scoff at all my tender ways;
And laugh whenever I make bold to find
Some answering echo in your heart . . . well, days
Are easy to endure if one is hard,
If one can meet a mood and match its tone,
Or, playing at your game, be on guard
And make a jest of love with heart of stone.

But in my dreams you never let me go;
And the consoling beauty of your voice
Brings surcease to my foolish heart, and so
I long for night and in my dreams rejoice.

Oh, take my day! But night, a flowering vine
Of dreams, you cannot take from me—they're mine!
—Gretchen Hood.

Things That Burn Me Up And Knock Me Cold

When your sentinel was on the West Coast he related the plight of Ruby Adams, an actress of a decade ago, now bed-ridden . . . The unfortunate woman was the victim recently of a sharpshooter, who promoted a benefit for her and then eloped with the gross receipts . . . Stars from Hollywood were persuaded to come to San Francisco for the affair, and some of them demanded costly hotel suites, orchids and other doodads . . . The irony of it, we said at the time, was that Ruby Adams, for whom the benefit performance was given, is now being sued for the deficit.

We now learn some of the items for which Miss Adams is being bothered—they include these: $16.50 for Peggy Joyce's Pullman trip . . . $39.90 for airplane transportation for George Raft gack to Hollywood plus $8.10 for luggage hauled for the same party. Perhaps Miss Joyce and Mr. Raft, who are not destitute nor in a hospital, will send their checks for those tiny amounts and help stop the farce.

ming Back for More

I don't want the support of daily newspaper," Huey is quoted as remarking. American press has lost its to influence public opinion the masses . . ."

Uh-huh.

Some Guy, Him

At the premiere of Eugene O'Neill's new hit, "Ah, Wilderness!" which enchanted the first audience at the Guild the other night, the star of the proceedings, George M. Cohan, set another of his fine examples for the students and even the stars to follow.

All featured players and stars, of course, wouldn't think of letting the management keep them from hogging the stage on their "first entrance" so that they might entice a reception. Not so with Mr. Cohan, who made his first entrance hiding behind another of the cast, who walked ahead of him. It failed to stifle the big round of handclapping, however.

The name is George M., as we observed once before, not George Ham.

Goal

While enjoying the new O'Neill play, one of the cast reminded me of how he used to take it on the chin waiting for jobs around Broadway. His name is Donald McClelland, and about a decade ago I wondered why young fellows like him, with talent for other lines, wasted their time "wanting to be actors."

It seemed to me then that McClelland wasn't cut out for show business—his luck seemed to prove that theory. The shows he joined usually died young—but he wouldn't give up. "Some day," he used to say.

And now there he is—in a hit—accounting for himself well enough to mingle with such guys as Cohan and O'Neill no less!

Wild Fights In Davis

By MARGARET GARRAHAN

Racing "hoss" thieves in Nevada hills, feuding with settlers from Kentucky, hold the Davis screen this week in a wild and wooly version of Zane Grey's story, "To the Last Man."

Most startling of all is our demure and feminine Esther Ralston, cast as a wild, barefoot girl of the plains, who wonders what "ladies" are like. She's so truculent that the bad men behave—which is some truculent!—and shocks our hero pah-lenty by deciding to spend a night in the open with him.

The story opens in the Kentucky hills after the Civil War with the murder of little Lynn Hayden's grandfather by Colby (Noah Beery) during a feud between the two families. Discarding the "eye for an eye" code of the mountaineers, Lynn's father invokes the law, and, after seeing Colby sentenced to 15 years, takes his family to Nevada. Little Lynn is left with his grandmother.

Sixteen years later we find Colby and his daughter (Esther Ralston) out in Nevada, with Lynn (grown up into Randolph Scott) about to arrive on the scene from the East, and Colby doing some high-class cattle rustling and "hoss" thieving. Aiding and abetting Colby in his ventures is the big, bad Jim Daggs (Jack La Rue).

Daggs is sweet on Esther; so is Lynn—and Esther is sweet on Lynn despite the family feud. There is much racing through the hills and vales, a lot of shooting between grim-faced men of the two factions, an attack on the Hayden homestead, and a dynamite "landslide" promoted by La Rue from which only Lynn escapes. The two have a battle in the girl's home and—you've guessed it!

A comedy, "Flirting in the Park," and a musical short featuring Gene and Glenn complete the bill.

Zasu and Slim In Warner

By MARY SHINE

Imagine a breach of promise suit in which creamed carrots and spinach are construed to be terms of endearment, and you have an idea of the crazy plot of the Warner's current offering. It also is showing in the Sheridan Square.

Zasu Pitts and Slim Summerville form a combination that makes stone walls snicker and in "Love, Honor, and Oh, Baby!" they are as funny as usual.

Slim plays an ambling, unsuccessful lawyer, engaged five years to Zasu. To hurry matrimony into view they decide to frame a breach of promise case on a banker, well known for his tendencies to take his office girls to Rochester for the week-end.

So-o-o-o-o—to make Rochester safe for the working girl, and get $100,000 love balm, Zasu and Slim get their framing done in a way that can be described only as unique, and put on the goofiest trial in the records—and win!

An official featurette presents Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles in a film to explain the NRA which can only make one wish that all involved workings of the government be explained that way, and everybody would be happy.

Steve Brodie Does Jump In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

With Carrie Nation and John L. Sullivan assisting, the once rowdy and ribald street known as "The Bowery" was brought to life yesterday on the screen of the Penn Theater. The picture with this title gives Wallace Beery an opportunity to play Chuck Connors, owner of a saloon and chief of a fire brigade, while George Raft is his rival, Steve Brodie, who describes himself as a gambler—and when he's told it's against the law, admits that "maybe the law is wrong."

Mr. Seibel

There is also Jackie Cooper with his weepy ways and a family of cats—and there is Fay Wray, whom Beery rescues from white slavers and who falls pronto in love with George Raft, after biting him.

When two brewers want to put their beer on the Bowery, and tell Steve he must do something sensational, he jumps off the Brooklyn Bridge. But before he does that, he has got Chuck Connors to dare him to do it, with the saloon as the stakes. There's a rough and tumble fight, Spanish War scenes, a stage show in the dive, plenty of suds and firewater, song hits of the gay '90s, ladies are knocked down with blackjacks, and a good time is had by all, including the audience.

Beery and Raft both appear at their best. Jackie still draws the tears, Fay Wray looks sweet and dumb, Oscar Apfel and Herman Bing are a credit to their brew, and a splendid job of directing was done by Raoul Walsh. It is a decidedly colorful, stirring and up-to-snuff picture, which may not be accurate history, but is a whole lot better.

Two other features help to make this a very fine bill—a gorgeous war farce in which Charley Chase plays a wild sergeant, and a beautiful colored bird picture with comment by Pete Smith.

Eva Tanguay Gets Aid

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 7.—They say that any old friend can make a touch off Mae West, but the blonde star's latest gesture had more than the usual amount of sentiment attached to it.

It was the sort of a kindness, too, that only a woman and an actress would have thought of.

For a long time now, Eva Tanguay has been ill in Hollywood, and down on her luck. Mae heard about it and did the usual thing. She took the woman who had known beauty and luxury to the hair-dressers and had them fix her a smart coiffure. Then she bought Eva a complete wardrobe.

What some people never knew and others have forgotten is that Mae West, 5 years old and making her first stage appearance in a Brooklyn theater, did such a good imitation of Eva Tanguay that the manager told her she could stay.

Mae remembered.

* * *

All jokes of the sort are credited to Samuel Goldwyn. They tell it that a star got temperamental and an assistant was sent to report to the producer that she had flounced off the set in a tantrum. The film chief's face got red.

"Go tell her," he shouted, "that I'll not have my stars leaving the set in a tandem!"

Statistics are usually boring, but listen to this. The costumes for 10 chorus girls in a number for "Flying Down to Rio" are made from 20 yards of thin leather strapping, two inches wide. Each girl has 72 square inches of covering.

MUSIC

Carnegie Lecture Hall

Carnegie Lecture Hall was crowded last night to hear once again one of our finest interpreters of folk lore, Isa Kremer. The concert was under the auspices of "Icor," a society for Jewish colonization in Russia, and was considerably extended by speeches for the welfare of brothers in that troubled land.

Mr. Lissfelt

Isa Kremer remains, like Yvette Guilbert, a great diseuse. Her voice, her spontaneity, her feeling for peoples of all countries, be it for the Kentucky mountaineer, the Neapolitan fisherman or the Yiddish gallant, and her broad talent for mimicry all unite to make her one of the most searching of reproductive artists in song.

Her program was taken strictly from folk music and the accompanist, Irving Korenman, offered several groups of piano music from Rubinstein, Chopin and Liszt.

Old-Fashioned Girl

KATHARINE HEPBURN, DESTINY GIRL OF THE SCREEN, IN "LITTLE WOMEN" ROLE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

English As She Is Wrote

SOME two weeks ago, there appeared in this space a letter from "Three-Fingered Gashouse Pete" to his old pal and former cellmate, Mickey. Pete, it seems, was in difficulty with the law because of a fur robbery and was being held in the Tombs because he couldn't raise bail money. He wanted to know if Mickey couldn't get it for him somehow.

If you remember, as you probably don't, Pete's letter was written entirely in slang—and I transplated the letter as it went along. One or two of the boys didn't like the column—are you listenin', Lou?—but its reception on the whole prompted me to write a sequel.

Today, then, we have Mickey's reply to "Gashouse Pete." This letter is presented exactly as was the other one; first the paragraph as written—and then the translation. All ready? So:

. . ."How'ya, Gashouse: Sure sorry to get the dope that once more you're a guest of the good people. But you certainly sent to a good guy for rope all right. Right now the best I can loan you is a couple of bars from my penthouse, on account I am waitin' for the mail myself."

("Dear friend Peter: I was indeed sincerely sorry to hear that you are incarcerated once again. Unfortunately your choice of a souurce of assistance is a very poor one. At the present moment, the very best I could do would be to lend you a few bars from my cell—because I, too, am incarcerated.")

"If you think things is tough with you, catch a load of this: I get snared on a cluck sneeze and, even with me roarin' like a Turk, I'm whipped into the Patsy Doyle and lugged to the house of fallen men."

("I feel, however, that I should be more explicit in my explanation of my misfortune. I was arrested on a false accusation and, even though I vehemently protested my innocence, I was, nevertheless, escorted to a patrol wagon and escorted to the police station.")

"It seems like somebody put the slug on a stromberry pie and waltzed away with a yard and a half. A squeaky shoe throws the glim right at poor little me, so I take it on the hammer up the broad highway."

("It seems that a Greek restaurant owner was beaten and robbed of one hundred and fifty dollars. A detective looked at me in a most accusing fashion—so I started to run up the avenue.")

"I'm doin' handy until the mug throws his persuader at me. It bounces right between my pins, and I throw a brodie in the bridle path. I git up, but the mug is standin' over me so I says I don't know what the rap is, but I ain't guilty."

("Temporarily, escape seemed quite possible. But the pursuing officer hurled his nightstick between my legs, and that caused me to fall in the gutter. Before I could regain my feet, the gentleman was upon me, so I emphatically denied all knowledge of why he was chasing me.")

"He grabs the collar of my fiddle and flute, and starts to put the quiz on me with his chalk forms. Finally he puts his duke into my insider, and comes away with the C and a half. I started to roar about bein' wrapped up, but the mug just grins and gives me the chorus girl's desire."

("Paying no attention whatsoever to my protestations, he placed his hand in my inside pocket and, much to my surprise, he found the $150. My further protests went for naught, for he simply smiled and placed the handcuffs upon me.")

"When I get to the local depot, I'm sloughed into the trap with a load of brindlestiffs. There wasn't a slick in the mob, and the worst guy collared was there for the pardon-me-stranger act."

("When I finally arrived at the station house, I was escorted to a cell that contained numerous unfortunate vagrants. There wasn't a real thief among the group, and the most desperate character present had been arrested for begging.")

"Finally I'm lugged out for the tall sisters, and I get the finger from a few of them. The big king behind the sticks throws up the flag for the good, old basedrum. I'm there now, and if it wasn't for one of the back-at-the-old-college men, I wouldn't be able to fly this kite."

("I was then brought out to face some of the police informers, and quite a few of them identified me as having been a participant in several recent robberies. The police lieutenant then gave the sign that I was to be held incommunicado. I'm still here. And if it hadn't been for the aid of one of the keepers who knew me from the state prison where I was last incarcerated, I wouldn't have been able to smuggle out this letter.")

"Of course I wouldn't put the little old monkey on no guy, and I hope you wind up with the birds and bees. But if it's gotta be angle cake and wine for the both of us, it would sure be swell if you were the guy to help me put the skids on the ole debbil."

("You know of course, that I wish nobody any ill luck, and my sincerest wishes are for your liberation. However, if the fates decree that we both be incarcerated, it would certainly be wonderful if you were with me to ward off the ever-present monotony of prison routine.")

"Your old pal,
"MICKEY."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 7.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Just been reading over the resolutions that were passed in Chicago by the American Legion this week. They were as levelheaded and broadminded as ever passed by any organization, and here was an astonishing thing, they come out unanimous for a sound dollar.

Will Rogers

Now that showed they wasn't taking the way out. And there was a body of men representing the cross-section of our country if ever one did. You would be surprised at the amount of people that don't care how much anything else jumps up and down every day, but they want to know what that old dollar is worth asleep or awake.

But enough of this. For the one way to detect a feeble-minded man is to get one arguing on economics.

Yours, WILL.

Bombardment On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The bombardment and fall of the National Hotel in Havana is brought to the screen by Hearst Metrotone News. With bullets flying all around, the Hearst Metrotone cameraman recorded in sight and sound the desperate battle in which 100 persons were killed and many wounded. The pictures show field pieces shelling the $4,000,000 hotel as drumming of machine guns goes on continuously. Finally a white flag is waved, signifying the surrender of the 500 beseiged officers. The Globe Trotter describes the battle.

President Roosevelt is shown addressing a conference of Catholic charities in New York City. Seated on the platform are Cardinal Hayes and other church dignitaries.

Highlights of the second game of the World Series show "Goose" Goslin making his home run, which proved to be Washington's only score. Then the dramatic sixth inning, in which six Giants are seen scoring to win the game, 6-1.

More than 100,000 Legionaires are shown parading in Chicago with a million persons lining the sidewalks.

The first shipment of cotton from the United States, under the $50,000,000 loan to China to aid the Dixie planters, is seen being unloaded in Shanghai.

Scenes in American distilleries show them operating full blast hustling to meet the demand expected with the repeal of prohibition.

Hubert Scott Paine is given a great ovation at Plymouth, England, upon his return from America where he raced Gar Wood.

(Note—Owing to the necessity upon the the managers to arrange their programs on time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above isue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.)

Good Variety Program In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Half the youngsters in town apparently took advantage of their school holiday yesterday to flock to the Pitt for a gay round of vaudeville.

There is plenty of that certain something the tired businessman is supposed to crave on the bill. Especially lovely in its beauty and rhythm is "A Revue Moderne," featuring Renoff and Renova in a series of graceful interpretive dances. Vivacious dancing, perfectly timed, are the Dell Twins' contribution to the success of the "Revue."

If you want to see a couple of really clever little tricks, keep your eye out for the Robin Sisters, Margot and Libby, who do some truly convincing impersonations of Ed Wynn, Zazu Pitts, Katharine Hepburn, in a scene from "Morning Glory"; George Arliss, as Voltaire, and a much-appreciated meeting, a trifle ludicrous, between the great Garbo and Mae West.

Poley and Latour, as well as Mel Klee, acting master of ceremonies, are the laugh-catchers of the show, with Rudell and Dunigan completing the "patter" acts. Instead of making you laugh, the "Six Royal Buccaneers," on the other hand, cause many a gasp with their see-saw acrobatics.

Sacred Music In Movie

One of the features of "Cradle Song," Dorothea Wieck's first American picture, is the musical score arranged by Franke Harling, and is the result of months of research on his part.

The selection of the sacred music which forms a large part of the score was supervised by Mgr. Peoples, S. J., and Father Olsen. The latter trained the nuns in the picture in the Latin responses and in the singing of the Gregorian chants.

The score also includes ecclesiastical compositions of the Fifteenth Century and a lullaby, "Cantilena to the Infant Jesus," composed in the same period.

In the fiesta scenes, a Gypsy orchestra plays the music of the period, some of which, notably the "Cantos Hanodos," was arranged by Francisco Vallejo. Much of this music was secured from the collection of original Spanish Gypsy themes in the library of Prof. Irving Brown, of Columbia University.

May Robson Grand in Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

With a preposterous but swell story, grand parts for several popular screen players, a lot of comedy, with a tear just on the verge, at times, and developments that are dramatic only in a farce comedy scene, "Lady For a Day," creates a new star of the screen. The picture is in the Stanley. May Robson, many years a stellar figure on the stage, is not new to the movies, but this is the first time she has had the central role, and after you see "Lady For a Day," you will thank the movie maker in one breath for advancing her, and heap coises on his head, in the next, for having held out so long.

The story is not preposterous in the fact that a poor, gin-loving apple-seller is able to maintain a daughter abroad, in ignorance of her mother's position in life. We can swallow that, feeling certain that similar things have been done, but the difficult thing is the manner in which the mayor of the city, the governor of the state, appear at her reception in a way that has a high hokum flavor, but is as pleasant as it is surprising.

We are not going to tell you about that, since it would only spoil your pleasure, and will briefly state that our "Lady For a Day," alias "Apple Annie," is nonplussed when she receives a letter from her daughter stating that she is coming from Spain, accompanied by her fiance, son of a count, the daughter supposing r mother to be a resident of a swell hotel. But her riff-raff friends rally 'round, with the result 'hat the count and the young lovers take the boat back home fully convinced that Annie is all she has pretended to be.

Miss Robson is nothing short of sublime in her portrayal of the bedraggled and sottish apple-seller, full of mother love and gin, and as the lady of the grand manner who rises above her nervousness in a masquerade that is the basis of the film.

Warren William has the best role he has had in a long time, as a recketeer chieftain, who engineers the deception, and Guy Kibbee, Ned Sparks and Glenda Farrell are close runner-uppers. Jean Parker, cute and sweet, is the daughter who never learns the real depth of her mother's love.

UMPIRE MORAN STORM CENTER OF SERIES ARGUMENT

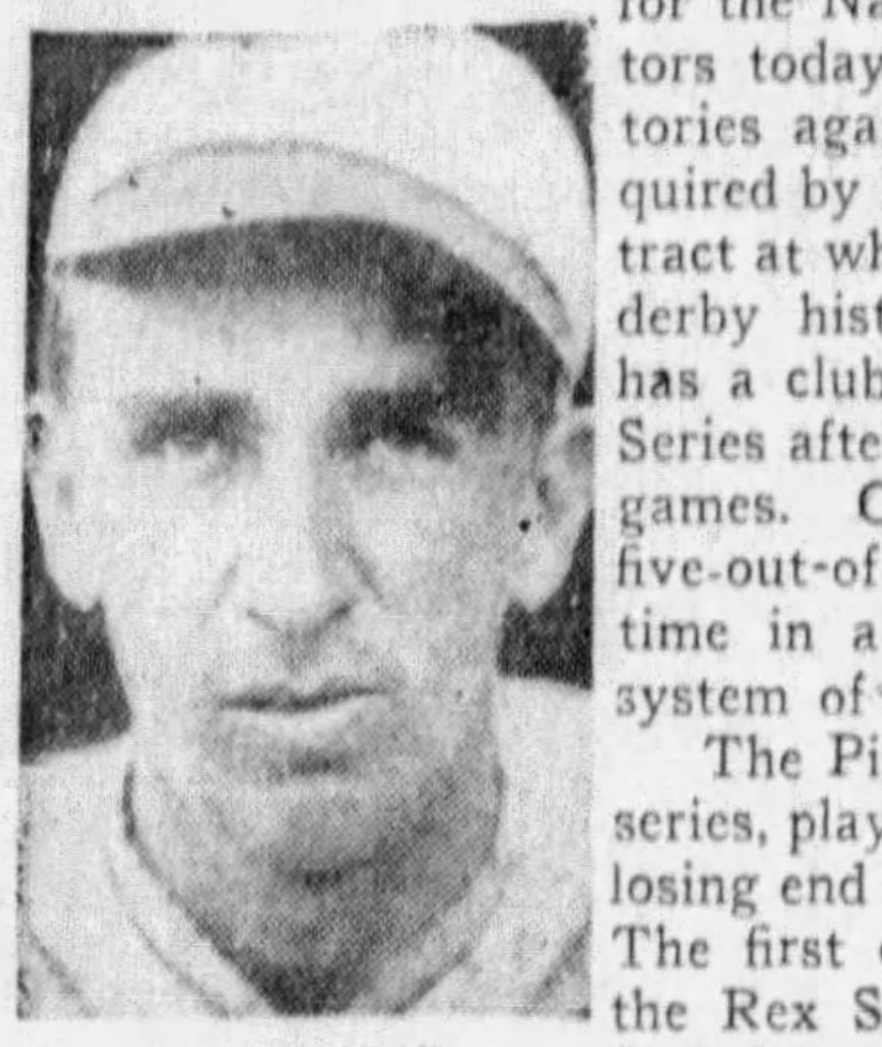
SPORTS

By JAMES J. LONG

Hubbell Almost Ends It. Another Big Duke Victory. Ruth's Marks Not Neared.
Veltman Rated as Prize. Huge Foe Awaits Plaid. State Has Schenley Color.

ONLY TWO IN NATS' HOLE EVER WON OUT

The second World Series victory of Carl Hubbell, who has not allowed a single earned run in his 20 innings of post-season pitching, left the Giants so close to clinching the big title for the National League that the Senators today, needing three straight victories against the one out of three required by New York, were facing a contract at which only two clubs in modern derby history succeeded. Only twice has a club come back to win a World Series after losing three of the first four games. Once it was done on a best-five-out-of-nine series, and the other time in a struggle under the present system of best four out of seven.



Carl Hubbell

The Pirates figured in both of those series, played 22 years apart, first on the losing end and then on the winning side. The first occasion was in 1903, when the Rex Sox, after losing three of the first four to Deacon Phillippe and the Bucs, rallied to win four straight and the series, five games to three. In 1925, the Corsairs were beaten in three of the first four contests by the Senators, but turned the tide and grabbed the series through three straight wins. In the same position occupied by the Cronins today, with the count three to one against them, the A's in 1905, the Tigers in 1908, the Cubs in 1910, the Giants in 1911-12-13, the Phillies in 1915, the Dodgers in 1916, the Cubs in 1918 and 1929, not to mention the Black Sox of 1919, all lost out.

DUKES MAKE THEIR OWN BREAK TO WIN

The harder the fight the more creditable the victory, and Duquesne University's football team must be said to have accomplished one of the biggest feats in the school's history in last night's 6-to-0 triumph over such a powerful major foe as Bucknell University after a game ranking with best seen here in several seasons.

The Dukes themselves made the break that won for them. When one player, Vic Vidoni, rushes in and blocks a forward pass just as it is launched, and an alert teammate, Gerald Baker in this case, plucks the ball out of the air and lugs it home 17 yards for a touchdown, it's good heads-up football rather than a lucky turn of chance. All honor to the best team Duquesne ever had. It's winning on its merits.

RUTH'S SERIES MARKS NOT EQUALED SOON

The fading Babe Ruth may not be seen in another World Series, but other participants in the present and future derbies probably will be shooting at his home-run records for a long time. Twice the Bambino made three round-trippers in a single series game, first in 1926 and again in 1928, both times against the Cards. He shares with Lou Gehrig the record of four homers in one series, and for total series four-basers he is far ahead of the all-time field with 15.

A home run with the bases full has been made only once in World Series competition. Elmer Smith clouted it for Cleveland against Burleigh Grimes, pitching for Brooklyn, in the first inning of the fifth game in the 1923 stakes, the same game in which Bill Wambsganss pulled the only unassisted triple play in World Series history.

VELTMAN SOUGHT BY TWO OTHER CLUBS

That the Pirates have acquired a catcher of unusual promise in Art Veltman, drafted from Oakland, is attested by draft meeting echoes, which disclose that two other National League clubs put in bids for the Coast Leaguer in the annual lottery, but drew different players and lost the coveted backstop to Bill Benswanger. Just before the draft session, Scout Bill Hinchman repeated his recommendation of Veltman to the Buccaneer president, pronouncing him fast, a hustler and having a good arm in addition to the player's impressive batting average of .336.

Bill Hinchman

Major league men who know of Veltman's qualities, including Connie Mack, Bill Terry, Donie Bush, Chic Fraser, Jim Tierney and others, continue to assure President Benswanger that he made a good grab. The support of Hinchman's judgment in the upper baseball set is unanimous, all agreeing that the Bucs have landed a catcher who ought to give them a lot of help where they need it. Veltman is 27, stands 6 feet in height, and weighs 175 pounds. He was first an outfielder, but took up catching and has come along fast.

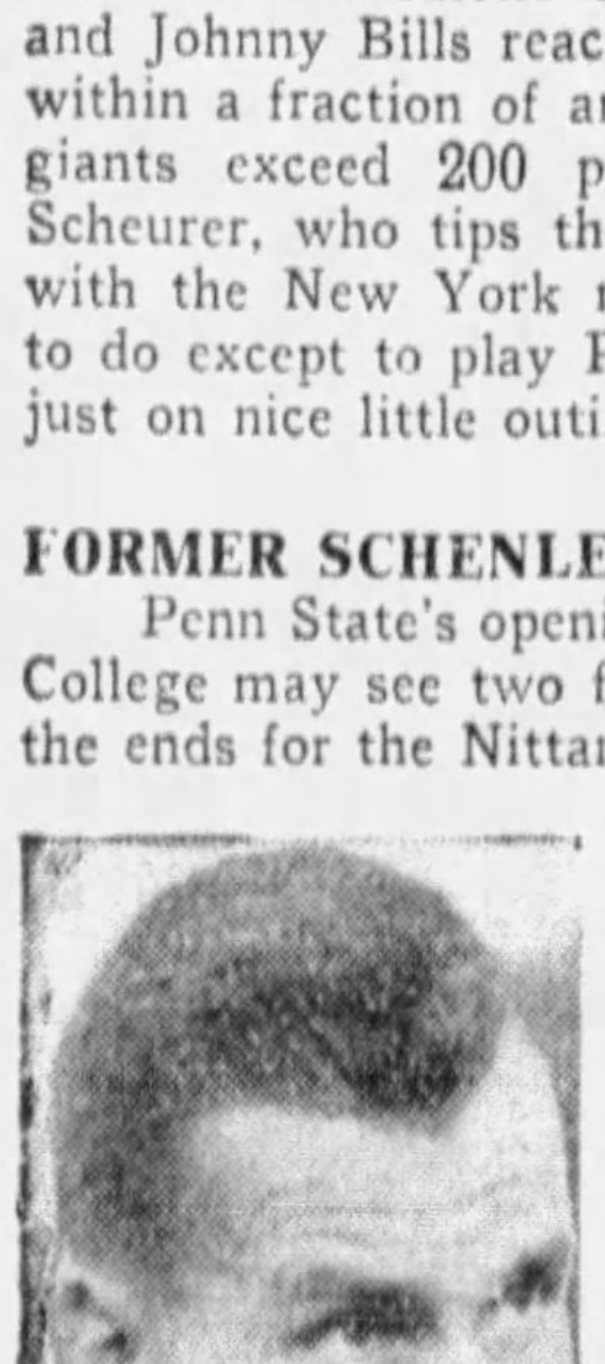
PLAID TO FACE TEAM OF GIANTS IN EAST

The schedule that stretches ahead of Carnegie Tech is enough in itself to give Howard Harpster a headache as he makes his debut as a major football coach against Pop Warner and Temple here today. And the more he hears about the teams to be met, the tougher it looks. The latest disturbing news concerns New York U., the eleven to be faced in New York on November 25.

Violet statistics show that 24 of the 48 candidates for the team are more than six feet tall and ponderous accordingly. The tallest is Stephen Shields, 6 feet 6¼ inches; Jim Ruddy goes 6 feet 6; Babe Scheuer and Pete Zaremba, tackles, are 6-3, Emilio DeBenedictis is half an inch shorter, while Allan Walz and Johnny Bills reach 6-2. Five others are 6-1, and 12 are within a fraction of an inch of those figures. Eight of these giants exceed 200 pounds in weight, the heaviest being Scheurer, who tips the beam at 235. Surviving the grapple with the New York mammoths, Carnegie will have nothing to do except to play Pitt five days later. The season will be just on nice little outing after another for Harp and his men.

FORMER SCHENLEY LADS AT STATE ENDS

Penn State's opening football game this afternoon at State College may see two former Schenley High School players at the ends for the Nittany Lions when the latter line up to face Lebanon Valley. If not at the start, at least they're likely to be playing together as terminal mates before the finish. Tommy Slusser, who is captain of the team, will be at the left end position, while at the opposite end of the line a likely choice is Buck McKee.



Buck McKee

Both are graduates of the Schenley school. They entered Penn State the same year and played on the freshman eleven together, but McKee was not in college the following season, so this is only his second year on the varsity, whereas it is the third for Slusser. Buck was on the squad last season, but did not play regularly. This fall, however, he is rated as a regular and may get the starting assignment, paired with Slusser. The end candidates listed on the Penn State roster include only one other letter winner. He is Harold Rosenberg, wrestling captain. Rosenberg weighs only 140 pounds in his football uniform and is a bit small for the position. McKee is a big fellow, ideally built for an end.

Pitt Eleven Choice To Beat West Va.

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 7.—The very mention of the a mint julep will arouse even the most lethargic of southern gentlemen to a high pitch, and the same goes for a Pitt-West Virginia football game here in West Virginia.

The panthers are in town today to resume an ancient and honorable gridiron relationship with the Mountaineers. Today's embroglio will be the twenty-eighth of a series, which had its inception back in 1900 and for the most part, has a very much Pitt affair. The Pitts have won 23 of the 27 games to date, have lost only three and been held even in one.

For the past two years the Panthers have ridden roughshod over the West Virginians. Last year, right here in the Mountaineer Stadium, it was 40-0, and the year before in Pittsburgh, 34 to 0. West Virginia won its last game from Pitt in '28, when Charley Edwards threw a pass into the flat. Little Sleepy Glenn intercepted the ball and returned it to a position where the Mountaineers were able to buck it over for a touchdown and win, 9 to 6, thanks to a safety scored earlier in the contest.

PITT FAVORITE

To date, the Mountaineers have shown little to warrant even the hope that they will beat Pitt today. They were tied by Wash-Lee and whipped by the Dukes. Pitt wasn't so hot last week in its inaugural tilt with Wash-Jeff, but won the ball game and figures to repeat the act today. In fact, that sad performance given against the Prexies a week ago figures to react very much to West Virginia's grief today.

It already has reacted to the grief of two Panther players who accounted themselves starting men a week ago. George Shotwell, at center, will be on the bench, for the start of the game at least, this afternoon, and so will Mike Nicksick, left halfback. Nick Kliskey goes at center and Howard O'Dell at the halfback.

The remainder of the Panther starting lineup will be the same as last week, with Rooker and Skladany at the ends; acting-Capt. Si Meredith and Walton at the tackles; Onder and Hartwig at the guards, and Hogan at quarter; Mike Sebastian at righthalf, and Izzy Weinstock at fullback.

Verne Baxter, sophomore, was used at left end yesterday in signal drill for a spell and may get in there ahead of Rooker today.

W. VA. LINEUP NOT SET

Coach Earle (Greasy) Neale is reported to have made a change or two in his battle front, but these changes will not be known until game time. It is likely, however, that the Mountaineers will line up with Onder and Goodwin at the ends; Stydahar and McDonald at the tackles; Swisher and Anderson at the guards, and Wright or Stewart at center, and with Eck Allen at quarterback, Heath and Thomas at the halves and Zaleski at full.

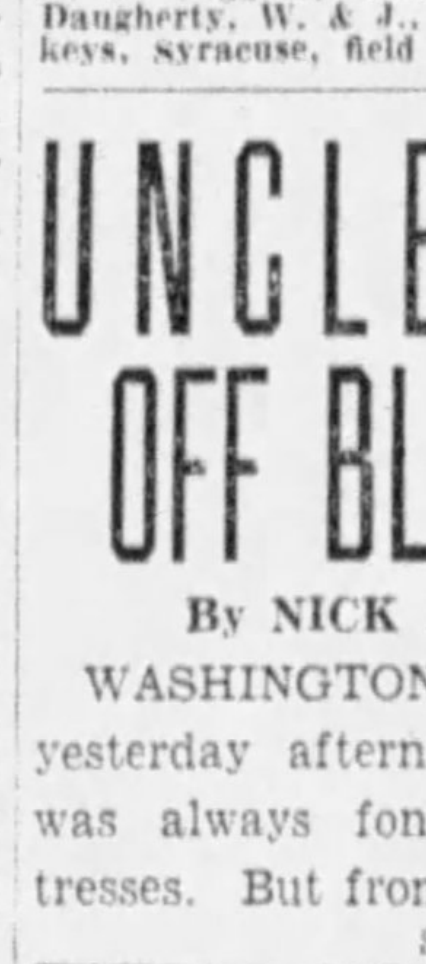
UNCLE NICK OFF BLONDES

By NICK ALTROCK

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Up to yesterday afternoon, Uncle Nick was always fond of any color tresses. But from now on, I have sworn off blondes. Before the series opened they were telling us about this kid, Ryan, but until yesterday's eleventh inning, I thought he was just a good monologist. And you cannot chin yourself into a base hit no matter how fast you swing your tongue.



Nick Altrock

But, I will say that with a Giant perching on second, Blondy Ryan delivered like a parcel postman leaving a nice sizzling bomb on your doorstep.

Then, in our half of the sudden death inning, with all three hassocks inhabited and only one out, our pinch swatter had to slam a grounder at Mr. Ryan and give him a double play.

So from now on Uncle Nicholas is off all blondes, from Baby Peggy to Greta Garbo. I admit our Washington club had half a dozen chances to pickle the game. But in the pinches, when Hubbell chucked his screw ball, we were tackling it with gimlets and wrenches instead of screw drivers.

A rare sight yesterday was a player getting the bum's rush in a World Series contest. But there is one thing Heinie Manush can brag about to his grandchildren. It took four umpires to put him out of the game.

Warner, Harpster to Cover Tech-Temple Game

Pop Warner, Temple football coach, will write his own story of today's game with Carnegie Tech at the Stadium for tomorrow's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Howard Harpster, Carnegie Tech coach, will review the game in a story in Monday's issue.

Harry Keck, sports editor of the Sun-Telegraph, will be in the press coop as the Tartans inaugurate their season this afternoon. Jess Carver is at Morgantown, W. Va., to report Pitt's game with West Virginia.

Alertness and speed paid a big dividend to the football forces of Duquesne University at Forbes Field last night as the Dukes won their fourth game of the current season, overcoming the most formidable eleven they've yet been called upon to face, Bucknell University's Bison team. The score was 6 to 0.

Young Gerald Baker, Duquesne left end, grabbed a partially blocked pass by Halfback Joe Reznichak, of Bucknell, in the third period and raced 17 yards for the touchdown. Reznichak was rushed by four Duquesne linemen as he faded back and attempted to heave the ball deep in his own territory. When he saw he was due to be smothered, and tossed for considerable of a loss, he made a wild attempt to get rid of the ball. He'd have been much better off had he taken the loss.

Bucknell threatened twice in the first period, driving to the Dukes' three-yard line shortly after the opening kickoff, but failed to get the ball over. Late in the final period, the Bisons marched from their own 20-yard line to the Dukes' 46, but an intercepted pass broke up the rally.

The Bisons were big enough and apparently fast enough, but their play was spotty.

The Dukes again displayed a smart, alert attack and a dogged and cagy defense. The line performed even more brilliantly than it did against West Virginia. The attack was led by Al DeLuca and Fullback Zaninelli gave a spectacular exhibition of punting.

A crowd of more than 18,000 witnessed the triumph of the locals.—JESS CARVER.

Pop Warner's Owls Battle Tech Here

By HARRY KECK.
Sports Editor.

Pop Warner comes back home again today. "Home" for Pop always will be Pittsburgh, at least insofar as the local football-going public is concerned.

The dean of coaches, who put the University of Pittsburgh on the high road to football success more than a decade and a half ago, and then left for Stanford University in California, has returned to the East and this afternoon he leads a strong Temple University football juggernaut from Philadelphia against Carnegie Tech at the Stadium, with the kickoff set for 2 o'clock.

AGE VS. YOUTH

Opposing the venerable Pop will be one of the youngest big-time coaches in the land, Howard Harpster, all-America quarterback at Tech in 1928 and one of the most brilliant players ever developed in these parts. Warner is old enough to be his grandfather. The duel of wits between the pair should be interesting to watch.

Temple opened its season Friday night of last week with an impressive display of scoring power against South Carolina in Philadelphia and Warner figures that if he gets safely past Tech today he will have a good chance of going through his first campaign with the Owls undefeated. He will show no quarter and ask none.

Carnegie always has been a thorn in the side of Temple. In their entire series of games, Temple never has been able to defeat the Pittsburgh aggregation. Last year's game ended in 7-7 tie.

TEMPLE RULES FAVORITE

However, Tech goes into today's fray with a more or less untried team, and Temple's chances of emerging on top are admittedly good. Gone from last year's Tartan squad are such stars as George Kavel, the halfback; Hooks Sample, the guard; Red Jones, the center; Ray Tesser, the end, and Stewart Dueger, the quarterback. Of the men who started the 1932 season as regulars only four remain. They are Capt. Colin Stewart, at left end; Croft, at left tackle; Bill Spisak, at left halfback, and Joe Mihm, at fullback.

Angelo Bevevino will be at quarterback today, with Vorderburg at the other half. Heinzer has been switched from right guard to left. Trbovich will be at center, Bunny Burzio at right guard, Doloway at right tackle and Libby Lewis, a comeback after suffering a broken leg in the Notre Dame game two years ago, at right end.

MANY DISTRICT GAMES

The play of the Harpster-Don Lovewell-coached Plaid squad will be watched with considerable interest, for it must meet Notre Dame on the same gridiron two weeks from today. The Tartans will be outweighed on both the line and in the backfield. They will suffer in comparison in the matter of experience with their highly-touted foe.

The Temple squad arrived in town last evening and shortly afterward Coach Warner was an honor guest with Coach Harpster at a dinner tendered in the Schenley Hotel.

Other games involving district college teams today include:

Series Players' Pool Lowest in Years

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—The players' pool, drawn from gate receipts of the first four games and amounting to $284,665.68, is the smallest for any baseball championship battle since 1922. It failed to pass the $300,000 mark for the first time in 11 years.

If the Giants carry through to victory, the "cut" for each will be approximately $4,600, on the basis of a 26-share split. If the Senators pull through, the individual share will run higher, for they figured their distribution on a basis of 22½ full shares.

The two runners-up, New York Yankees and Pittsburgh Pirates, will split 50 per cent of the consolation money or a total of $42,699.85.

GIANTS HAVE WORLD TITLE IN GRASP

the records to ascertain the identities of the few players who have been tossed out of World Series in the 30 years of play, but the home fans and the Washington players were concerned more with the Manush incident from the effect it had on the ball game. Aside from scrappy Frank Chance and one or two others there have been no World Series ejections.

Umpire Moran claimed that Manush had pushed or struck him slightly with his open hand as Heinie sped past him in trying to beat out a roller in the sixth inning. The play was so close it might have been called either way.

MANUSH BALKS

Heinie refused to leave the game and had to be held by strong men like Umpire Moriarty, of his own league. Manush apparently wanted to carry it further with Moran.

Owner Clark Griffith complained to Judge Landis about the unfortunate official, who was the target for a couple of pop bottles and a lot of abuse during the remaining innigns of the game. A dozen police stood by as he was escorted to a car leaving the park.

The decision had a distinct bearing on the furious contest a it would have placed Senators o third and first with one out. Go Goslin moved over to left Sheriff Harris played right a Manush was persuaded to leave the scene.

Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis ruled Manush eligible for play in today's game, and stated that if any fine was inflicted on the Senator outfielder, it would not be done immediately.

The first extra-inning game of a World Series since 1924 produced another shining hero in John (Blondy) Ryan, the lanky, scrappy kid who patrols the shortfield for the Giants. Ryan not only drove in the winning run with a slashing single in the eleventh, but he started a double play in the home half with the bases loaded and one out to bring the whirlwind fight to a close.

Carl Hubbell recorded his second victory of the big series on the skill of Ryan and his mates. Memphis Bill Terry gave his men the right inspiration for success as he put them in front with a prodigious homer in the fourth inning. This was the only run of the game until the seventh when Luke Sewell smacked a single to center to score Kuhel.

WEAVER HURLS WELL

Monte Weaver gave a fine slab performance for the home team, but Travis Jackson, leading off in the eleventh, caught Bluege off guard with a bunt and after Mancuso sacrificed Ryan came through with his winning hit.

The Nats loaded the bases with one out in the home half. Cliff Bolton batted for Relief Pitcher Russell and Ryan turned his smash into a lightning double play with the aid of Critz and Terry.

CLASS AA BATTLES HEAD SCHOOL GRID CARD

All-America Players Rated

By CHRISTY WALSH

Member, All America Board of Football (Reg. U. S. aPt. Orffice)

Although some of the big teams encountered stubborn resistance in opening contest last Saturday the games afforded little opportunity to judge just what individual players might do in the face of stronger rivals. Consequently the All-America ratings for the first week do not give a very adequate picture of the new faces who should shine this season, but there were, nevertheless a number of outstanding performers, whose work should rate them All-America gain in the weeks to come.

The following are the first 10 players selected for 1933; each will receive a Card of Merit authorized by the All-America Board of Football.

1—DANOWSKI, Fordham. The Maroons won by a large score and touchdown honors were passed around, but the leadership and inspiring play of this Fordham captain dominated the game when he was in the lineup.

2—CRAYNE, Iowa. Turning back a Big Ten rival for the first time in four years, Iowa owes its victory over Northwestern in large measure to the great work of Dick Crayne, sophomore ace, who gained 119 yards from the line of scrimmage in 27 starts.

3—TRUEX, Rutgers. Accounting for four of his team's 10 points, this player was a principal factor in the defeat of Franklin and Marshall. In addition to his passing and defensive play, Treux scored a point after touchdown and drop-kicked a goal from the 33-yard line.

4—GRIFFITH, Southern California. For three quarters of this game, little Loyola held the mighty Trojans to a scoreless tie—and then, through a penalty, came the break. After this, on a fourth down attempt, Homer Griffith plunged across the goal line. Griffith turned the tide and two more touchdowns followed.

5—BOEHM, Middlebury. Boston University proved a stubborn foe and it took the super-performance of Walter Boehm and Dick Williams to give Middlebury a close and hard-earned victory. Boehm made the only touchdown, on a buck from the 16-yard mark, and, together with Williams, reeled off 225 yards from scrimmage.

6—PRENDERGAST, Manhattan. This game with Clarkson, was another nip-and-tuck affair and but for the leadership of Capt. Prendergast his teammates might have been defeated. Prendercast played the entire game, scored all his team's points and rallied them successfully when Clarkson threatened to win.

7—RAND, Dartmounth. This sophomore "dark horse" in his first varsity game, was only six minutes in the lineup—but that was long enough to score three touchdowns and throw a pass that netted 60 yards.

8—MANTENUTO, Rhode Island State. Here was another close game in which the work of one player eventually brought victory to his teammates, by the close score of 6 to 0. Johnny Mantenuto, alert, wide awake substitute, intercepted a forward pass in the shadow of his own goal and ran the length of the field for the only score of the day.

9—BACH, Kentucky. And another low-victory based on the performance of a one-man exploit was the 7-to-0 win of Kentucky over Sewanee when Bach, returning a punt behind perfect interference, galloped 75 yards to a touchdown in the final quarter.

10—DOMINGUE, Texas Aggies. Still another close one, and this time one of the big upsets of the afternoon. The brilliant play of Quarterback Domingue was just the inspiration needed by the Aggies to beat Tulane—the first time any team has turned that trick on opening day in 10 long years.

GRAYS FACE CRAWFORDS

The Pittsburgh Crawfords and the Homestead Grays meet in a double header this afternoon at Greenlee Field, with the first game carded for 2:30. Next week Owner Gus Greenlee expects to take the Crawfords to the Pacific coast for the winter.

WILKINSBURG GETS TEST IN KEN HIGH

By JULIUS LEVIN

New Kensington High School's football team will have an opportunity to take undisputed possession of first place in the class AA race this afternoon when it clashes with Wilkinsburg High School at Graham Field, Wilkinsburg. The Glockmen already own a triumph at the expense of Norwin, having won, 20 to 6.

The valley gridders will find the Wilkinsburg Red and Blue machine in an ugly mood following its unexpected setback at the hands of Crafton last Saturday.

Another class AA duel features Washington and Clairton at Clairton. It is the first double A engagement for both teams and the outcome is a tossup as neither team has displayed much in its early-season encounters.

Three members of the City League go out of town for important engagements. South High School, favorites to win the Section I title, invades Altoona to meet Snaps Emanuel's eleven, Coach Ed Mazeski takes his South Hills aggregation to Martins Ferry to oppose Earl Loucks' machine and Schenley invades Jeannette.

The schoolboy gridders went to it with a vim yesterday, thrilling combats dotting the card.

McKeesport scored in the closing moments of play to nose out Homestead last night at Homestead, 6-0; Duquesne defeated Stowe by the same count, when Greaves, left halfback, intercepted a pass in the second quarter and raced 31 yards for a touchdown; Tarentum won over Springdale, 12 to 0; Brownsville won from Masontown, 8 to 6; Crafton nosed out Aspinwall, 7 to 6; Nineveh lost to West Alexander, 12 to 0; East Pike Run bowed to Bridgeville, 7 to 6; Uniontown ran wild against Scottdale, winning, 58 to 0; Freedom was held even by Edgewood, 0-0; Waynesburg upset California, 37 to 0; Elizabeth took West Newton, 14 to 0; Scott had an easy time beating Mt. Lebanon, 19 to 0; Pitcairn routed Franklin Township, 38 to 2, and Perry crushed Shady Side Academy, 27 to 0.

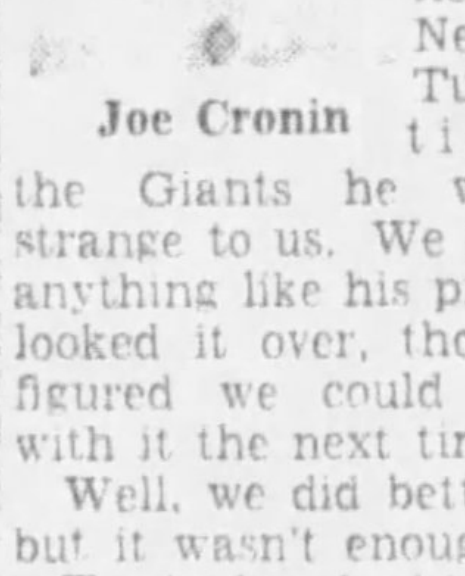
Central Catholic downed St. Marys in a Catholic High School League fracas, 31 to 0; Bentleyville and Avella drew, 0-0; New Castle crushed Union Township, 35 to 0, and East Liverpool had an easy time in taking over Toronto, 24 to 0.

DEFEAT BLOW TO CRONIN

By JOE CRONIN

Manager Washington Senators, American League Champions.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Carl Hubbell was too much for our Washington club again and to say that I am greatly disappointed by the loss of this fourth game of the World Series is putting it mildly. It really is a stunning blow to me.



Joe Cronin

I was confident we would take Hubbell the second time we faced him. When he beat us in New York last Tuesday the first time we faced the Giants he was something strange to us. We had never seen anything like his pitching. Having looked it over, though, all of us figured we could do something with it the next time.

Well, we did better than before but it wasn't enough.

Too bad we had to waste all that great pitching by Monte Weaver. Up to and after that home run Bill Terry hit in the fourth inning until the eleventh, Monte was in fine form.

If any thing, Hubbell pitched an even better game against us here than he did in new York. Then he had so many of us striking out he rarely was in grave trouble. In the game here, however, we gave him much more fight and often during the play he was in a situation where a lone hit would have meant his ball game. Yet he never wavered under fire.

Notables to Attend Veeck Rites Today

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—A grief-stricken baseball world, stunned by the comparatively sudden death of William L. Veeck, 56-year-old president of the Chicago Cubs, will pay last respects at his funeral in Hinsdale, a suburb, today.

John A. Heydler, president of the National League, with a group of club owners deserted the World Series to attend. Members of both the Cubs and the White Sox will attend in a body. Their city series game, scheduled for today has been postponed as a mark of respect.

The Sox shut out the North Siders again yesterday, winning, 9 to 0. Ted Lyons, who has been beaten 21 times this year, pitched for the White Sox, being reached for only seven hits.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE DESTROYER OF THE WORLD—The great gun called Jahan Kosha (Destroyer of the World) was built in 1637 during the reign of Shah Jehan. It is now embedded in a pepul tree in Tope Kahna (Gun Battery) within the Artillery Park belonging to the Nawab, not far from Katra, Bengal, India. The growing tree seems to have lifted the gun from its carriage, raising it to a height of about four feet from the ground, completely swallowing the wheels of the carriage. The iron works and trunnions are still visible. The 17,500-pound gun, which originally was given its terrifying name for its mammoth size, now is an object of religious veneration and attracts a great many native pilgrims who go there to pay their respects to the old engine of destruction. THE MOST SUCCESSFUL JOCKEY OF THEM ALL—Fred Archer, known as the "Terrible Tinman," is described as the most successful jockey of them all. Out of a total number of about 8,000 mounts, he rode 2,447 winners, among them five Derbies, four Oaks and six Legers. Eight times he rode more than 200 winners in a year. Although his weight was against him, it is said no one ever equaled him in popularity, fame or audacity and fearlessness. THE STRONG BOY OF THE SOUTH—Paul Conrad, of Washington, D. C., aged 21 and weighing 154 pounds, carried a 145-pound man up the 898 steps of Washington Monument without missing a step or making a stop. When he reached the top he had lost four pounds in weight. According to the astonished guards at the monument this was the first time the feat ever was accomplished.

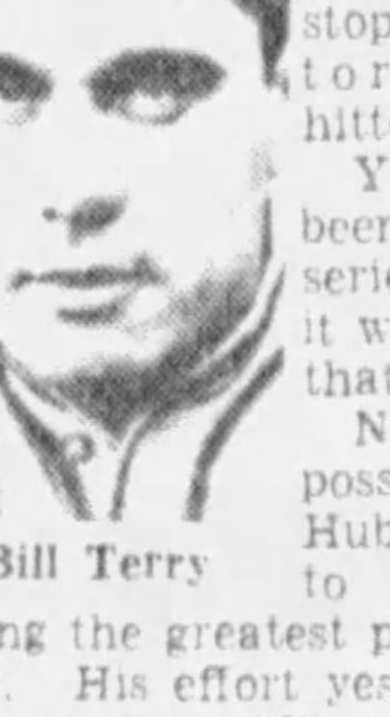
SERIES OVER, TERRY SAYS

By BILL TERRY

Manager New York Giants, National League Champions.

It looks like we've got the Senators now. To beat us now they must take three straight, and I'm sure they can't do that.

I honestly believe they won't win one more. Hal Schumacher is to go after the fourth victory this afternoon, and it was demonstrated in New York that he can stop the Senators' strongest hitters.



Bill Terry

Yes, this has been a pitching series so far, and it will be decided that way.

Nobody can possibly question Hubbell's right to a ranking among the greatest pitchers of all time. His effort yesterday was a masterpiece. After only two days of rest, he was the complete master of a team that was the strongest batting unit in the American League throughout the regular season.

The climax, the spectacular double play executed by Ryan and Critz, left me shaking with excitement for a quarter of an hour after the game. Incidentally, there's a story connected with the play. Critz and Ryan sold me on the idea of playing for the double killing.

After I had instructed Hubbell to fill the bases with an intentional pass to Sewell, and Bolton was substituted for Pitcher Jack Russell, I intended to have the infield play in on the grass for a play at the plate.

But the two infielders argued otherwise and so convincingly I finally agreed. Jackson and myself played close to the grass and the two middle men played deep.

And it worked out just that way.

D.-E. Easy Victor Over West Liberty

ELKINS, W. Va., Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Continuing its high scoring, Davis and Elkins College swamped the West Liberty Teachers football team yesterday, 54 to 0, for its fourth straight victory.

Gov. H. G. Kump and 3,000 fans, part of a crowd of 50,000 here for the Mountain State forest festival, saw the Senators pile up two touchdowns each quarter and add six extra points.

BAER RAVES OVER THRILLER

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—They finally pulled off a baseball game down here that the cow can chew on all winter.

It was the first real exciting contest of the series. It proved that a playing manager can think just as well at first as he can at short.

For 10 innings yesterday the Giants and the Senators were as even as the Siamese twins in a group picture. We don't say the best team won, but we do say it didn't lose.

Warner, Harpster Honored at Dinner

Earl Yoemans, Temple's graduate manager; Fred Swan and Charley Winterburn, Warner's assistants; Don Lovewell and Al Irwin, of Tech, were among the guests.

WAGNER LAUDS GREAT WORK OF RYAN

By HONUS WAGNER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The third battle of the World Series was a humdinger, but the fourth game, I believe, stands out as one of the greatest in the history of these title clashes, and I have been watching or playing in them for many years.

Honus Wagner

I would like to say a few more words about Blondy Ryan, the young shortstop of the Giants. Naturally, I like to study a young shortstop. Before the series opened I indicated I thought highly of young Ryan, and yesterday he showed me he has the real qualities of a smart player and a fighter.

If you listened in at the game you know that Monte Weaver made Blondy look bad the first two times up. A boy lacking in nerve would have been discouraged but Blondy stepped up later and smacked out two fine singles, the last of which won the old ball game.

Bill Terry's homer in the fourth was the longest hit of the series. It was smacked against the wind into the centerfield bleachers.

In the sixth inning, Manager Cronin changed his style of play. Instead of playing for a big inning, Joe realized he had to have a run to stay in the game, so after Myer had singled he instructed Goslin to sacrifice.

A moment later the big storm broke on the Manush decision, where Hubbell covered first to take Critz' throw after Terry had been pulled out of his position on a ball on his right. The play was very close and had Umpire Moran called Manush safe, the whole picture would have been changed.

STOCK PRICES FIRM IN DULL TRADING

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Stocks wre steady to firm in extremely dull early dealings today. Attention centered mainly on the repeal issues and other specialties. Rails and utilities showed moderate improvement while a number of industrial leaders moved at slight variance from previous closings.

National Distillers advanced 3 points while gains of around 2 were registered by American Commercial Alcohol, Schenley Distillers, Industrial Rayon, U. S. Smelting, Case and Deere. New York Central, Union Pacific, General Motors, United States Steel, Cerro de Pasco, Public Service of New Jersey, Celanese, Standard Oil of California and Sears Roebuck firmed sizeable fractions to around a point. American Can and Smelting were unchanged while American Telephone slipped a minor fraction.

Efforts of the President to settle the troublesome coal strike situation were viewed hopefully in the financial district. Labor difficulties, brokers say, have been a serious handicap to both speculative and investment buying of securities. If the coal-steel strike problem can be solved, it is believed, agreements probably can be reached soon in other labor misunderstandings throughout the country.

Announcement of another administrative move—the formation of a credit corporation to lend to farmers on crop security—was highly interesting to Wall street in that it was interpreted as a concrete action to raise commodity prices and thus expand the purchasing power of the agricultural community.

It is expected that the first steps of the new corporation, which will have an original capitalization of $3,000,000, will be to make good the President's promise to lend cotton farmers 10 cents a pound on their present crop if they agree to reduce acreage 40 per cent next year.

Renewed strength of the dollar in early foreign exchange dealings was thought to indicate a further waning of inflationary hopes and fears. The British pound stetrling was off more than 3 cents at one time at $4.69⅞ and the French gold franc lost .06 of a cent at 5.94 cents. Other European currencies were soft.

GRAINS MAKE SHARP GAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Sharp upturns in grain values early today followed President Roosevelt's announcement of a new agency to lend government funds to commodity producers. Steep advances of cotton quotations were also a stimulus to grain buyers. Opening ¼-1¼ up, wheat afterward rose further. Corn started with ⅛-1¼ gains, and continued to mount.

Medicinal Liquor Quota Increased

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Commissioner of Industrial Alcohol Doran announced that permission has been granted to domestic distillers for production of an additional 7,000,000 gallons of whisky during the remainder of the calendar year. This brings the total quota for the year to 18,000,000 gallons, and will permit all legitimate distillers in the United States to operate at capacity production from now until January 1.

Europe Buying Stocks On Theory Gold Is Near Top

Houses in New York with substantial foreign connections report that demand for American securities from such sources is continuing. Such purchases are persistent if not especially large, it is said, with the balance on the buying side each day for more than a week. Such demand, it is understood, arises from the growing belief, indicated in private advices from abroad, particularly London, that the open market price for gold is probably somewhere near its top. On this theory the urge to hold American securities is reported growing perceptibly stronger.

Total borrowings by members of the New York Stock Exchange against collateral on October 1 last, were 2.74 per cent of market value of all shares listed, compared to the September 1 total of 2.50 per cent, an increase of 0.24 per cent. On October 1, 1932, the ratio stood at 1.42 per cent. The average market value of all shares listed on October 1 was $25.32, against $28.42 on September 1, and $20.39 on October 1, 1932.

Watching corn follow the downward flight in rye yesterday to sell at the limit lows permissible under trading rules of the "pit," grain traders in New York circles were not a little nettled. When wheat sold down in the low 40-cent levels some months ago, it was pointed out that the grain was bringing less than certain grades of soil or dirt. Yesterday, with corn slipping off the limit, it was remarked that the grain was selling for less than "grass," meaning, of course, alfalfa hay.

Every kind of grain except wheat plunged down yesterday to the lowest prices that exchange rules would permit. An avalanche of stop-loss selling overwhelmed the speculative grain pits. Trade comment was unanimous that the main reason lay in absence of definite public knowledge of administration monetary plans. The late rally of about a cent in wheat was ascribed in part to "spread" operations between Chicago and Winnipeg, buying at Chicago against Winnipeg sales. A feature in this connection was purchase of 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat for shipment overseas. Some traders assert that as the United States is on a domestic basis so far as price is concerned, there is no longer the market support that used to be received from buying to fill resting orders on trans-Atlantic account.

The world wheat situation was gone over yesterday with State Department officials by John V. A. MacMurray, minister to the Baltic States, who will represent the United States at the international wheat conference in London next month. The London meeting on November 27 was called in the hope of bringing Soviet Russia into an international agreement to limit wheat exports. MacMurray recently returned from London, where he was in conference with representatives of Soviet Russia who are handling the wheat problem. He said he probably would leave for London early in November.

Added testimony to the strong position of member banks of the Federal Reserve was given by the drop in borrowings of members from the system revealed in the latest bank statement. Normally customers' demands for currency at the month-end cause the banks to draw on their system. The large amount of excess reserves, at the present time, permitted the banks to meet the month-end demand and still cut their borrowings by $10,000,000 to a record low. The increase in currency in circulation of $57,000,000 was a normal month-end advance. In spite of reiterated reports that the Federal Reserve would increase the pace of its weekly purchases of government securities, no such increase occurred. For the eighth week, purchases were maintained at approximately $35,000,000.

WESTERN RAILS CUT FARES

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Officials of all railroad lines operating west of Chicago today announced an experimental reduction of passenger fares and a one-third cut in the price of Pullman travel, effective December 1.

The experimental period will last for six months, according to Harry G. Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives. More than 50 officials attended the meeting.

Under the new rate the basic passenger charge, now set at 3.6 cents per mile, will be lowered to 3 cents per mile for one-way tickets and 2 cents per mile for round trip tickets issued for a time limit greater than 10 days.

Eastern lines are expected to adopt a similar plan shortly, it was stated, to stimulate rail travel.

Donnelly was taken to the hospital when a bruise on his right leg became infected 14 weeks ago. When it was decided a blood transfusion was necessary yesterday, six firemen from the Central Fire Station of McKeesport, where Donnelly is a fireman, reported at the hospital.

SENATOR DALE, VERMONT, DIES

ISLAND POND, Vt., Oct. 7.—(AP.)—United States Senator Porter Hinman Dale lay dead today at his summer home in the nearby mountain town of Newark—victim of a heart attack.

Dale, a Republican and the senior United States Senator from Vermont, was 66. He had been stricken ill about a month ago but apparently had recovered. Three days ago he suffered a heart attack and failed to rally.

In 1910 he was elected to the Vermont Senate and for several years he was a member of the Republican State Committee. He later served five terms in the House of Representatives.

The height of his political power came during the more recent years. He was elected to serve an unexpired term in the United States Senate on November 6, 1923, and was subsequently twice re-elected.

HUSBAND WINS DIVORCE

Because his wife, according to a judge's decision, was given to exaggeration, Charles P. Brand, of 523 Avery street, today had a divorce from Mary M. Brand, of Illinois avenue, Dormont.

In 1926 Mrs. Brand went to California. After waiting several months, Brand testified, he stored their furniture.

Mrs. Brand later returned and sued her husband in desertion court.

Judge Thomas M. Marshall yesterday heard the divorce case of Cora H. Gray, 120 Ruskin avenue, who charges Harry S. Gray, of Foxboro, Mass., with desertion.

Struck by an automobile near his home last night, George Beattie, 8, of 2600 Sarah street, was taken to South Side Hospital.

Mrs. Mary Braboski, 70, of 1713 Penn avenue, suffered lacerations and bruises when struck by a truck which was backing from a loading platform in Mulberry way, near Seventeenth street, yesterday. She was taken to West Penn Hospital.

Grimacing Slayer Sentenced to Death

Runaway Horses Hit Traffic Light

Down Linden avenue in East Pittsburgh today a team of runaway horses, pulling a wagon of the Valley Dairy Company, dashed. After a wild run of four blocks they crashed into a traffic-light block. One man was reported to have been struck by a wagon and to have had his leg fractured.

News and Views

COFFEE DELIVERIES

United States coffee deliveries for the three months ending with September exceeded those of the corresponding period last year in the face of earlier calculations of a decline as a result of competition from legalized beer. The figures as reported by the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange were 2,879,000 bags compared with 2,527,000 for the 1932 period.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS

Wholesale dry goods trade throughout the country last month was off considerably from July levels, according to trade reports. Wholesalers attribute the drop to resistance by retailers to the higher prices which many jobbing houses are forced to charge on replacement goods.

EASTERN STEAMSHIP

A. B. Sharp, comptroller of Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., has been elected president, succeeding the late Capt. Eugene E. O'Donnel, who died last April. J. A. Downs has resigned as chairman of the board of directors and has been elected chairman of the executive committee. George Hawley has been elected chairman of the board.

YEAR-END SUGAR STOCKS

Year-end stocks of sugar available for the United States market will amount to 580,000 long tons, a decrease of 471,000 tons from December 31 last, reports B. W. Dyer & Co., sugar broker. This figure includes 350,000 tons segregated by decree of the Machado government of Cuba. No allowance has been made for hurricane damage, but "this is believed to have been small" in the firm's opinion.

RAYON YARN ACTIVE

The volume of rayon yarn business for December is reported to be exceptionally heavy. Producers are being compelled to continue their allotment policy and at the present rate of demand the month's production will be sold up shortly, it is believed.

TOY PROMOTIONS EARLY

Early promotions of toys because of the late date of Thanksgiving this year are being planned by many retailers, it is reported. Indications are that many toy departments will be put into readiness by the middle of November or sooner.

STEEL CONSTRUCTION BOOKINGS

Bookings of steel construction in August by 179 companies amounted to 75,688 tons, against 56,482 tons by 192 companies in July and an average of 63,252 tons per month by 182 companies in the first half of this year, the American Institute of Steel Construction, Inc., reports.

ARMOUR TO BUILD CARS

Armour & Co. plans to build 500 refrigerator cars in its own shops. The underframes will be made by Pullman Car and Manufacturing Company.

ATCHISON LOADINGS

Atchison Railway September loadings totaled 106,020 cars, comparing with 98,912 in August and 106,138 in September, 1932.

QUIET TRADING ON LOCAL MARKET

Quiet trading marked the short week-end session on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. Volume of business dwindled further, consisting mainly of a few transactions in some of the recently active stocks at figures which showed no material change from their last previous prices. On the "big board" the situation was practically unchanged with traders apparently at sea as to just which side of the market was the more favorable at the moment.

A rather soggy opening in New York was followed by a mild rallying movement with the liquor stocks continuing as the favorites of the trading fraternity. An increase in the allowable production of medicinal whisky over the remainder of the year stimulated this group. Steels and other heavy industrials were steady to firm.

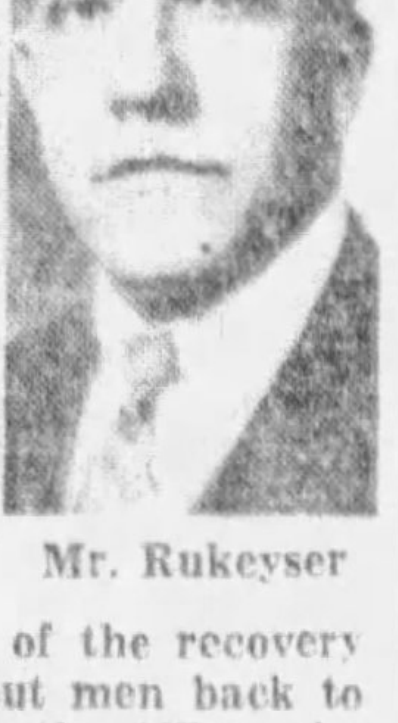
STRIKES SEEN CHALLENGE TO RECOVERY

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The process of economic recovery has become seriously challenged by an epidemic of strikes.

Accordingly, the demand is growing in influential business quarters for a Presidential pronunciamento on the subject.



Mr. Rukeyser

One thoughtful executive, who in in his thinking is guided by the logical sequence of events, is of the opinion that the Chief Executive ought to say something like the following:

"The purpose of the recovery program is to put men back to work. Through the NRA, the farm program, and other instruments of recovery we have already made substantial progress. This process of adding to the total of gainful employment has been interrupted by a growing series of strikes. Such strikes are ill timed at present, especially since new machinery has been set up for protecting the workers in regard to wages, hours, and other matters. After the process of re-employment has been completed and business is back to normal, the right to strike can again be freely exercised, but meantime it becomes a patriotic duty for workers to stay on the job."

HOOVER SUCCESS

The Presidential prestige in this situation would prove extremely great. As the proven friend of organized labor, Mr. Roosevelt would be respectfully heeded.

Former President Hoover in his White House conferences in November, 1929, succeeded for a considerable time in effecting a truce between capital and labor.

A year ago with business flat on its back, there seemed little to be gained from prostrate business.

There is another aspect to the situation. The NRA has resulted in spreading the work, and, though wage rates per hour may have been raised, weekly pay receipts were in many instances lowered through the reduction of working hours. Those who had formerly been fully gainfully employed reluctantly accepted leisure instead of money. Thus to a degree labor discontent has spread from the 30 per cent unemployed to the whole array.

Then too, the reference to the right of collective bargaining in connection with the codes led to increased activity on the part of labor organizations.

Employers charge that walking delegates told workers that they could not get the benefits of NRA without joining a union.

With the evidence of the technical effectiveness of the guild union type, as exemplified by the United Mine Workers, the American Federation of Labor which has traditionally fostered craft unions, has been making some progress in trying to introduce the guild type in the hitherto unorganized automobile and chemical trades.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Bank clearings again make a somewhat irregular showing. The total this week for all leading cities in the United States, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., of $4,792,001,000 was 1.1 per cent below that of a year ago. At New York City, clearings were $3,261,550,000, a reduction of 0.4 per cent, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,531,351,000 was 2.6 per cent lower.

The decline outside of New York City was largely at Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. Payments in both years cover the heavier monthly and quarterly settlements due at this time, but the amount this year was less than even the restricted total of a year ago. This week's clearings exceed those of the preceding week by $534,998,000, but a year ago the amount was larger by $953,433,000. Clearings at the South continue considerably in excess of last year's and the same is true for the Pacific Coast points. Of the 21 cities reporting, there are gains at 13 centers.

Figures at leading cities, showing increases and decreases as compared with those of last year, and printed herewith; also daily bank clearings for the year to date:

PRICE-FIXING COMPARED TO PROHIBITION

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, N. Y. University.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Seldom have I seen so much wisdom packed into a telegram as is found in the wire sent by Marshall Field & Company to General Johnson. It concerns price-fixing, and reads as follows:

"Effective policing under price-fixing and trade practice provisions is sheer impossibility, and any sincere attempt to do so will show that government has tackled as hard a task as enforcing prohibition, and for the same fundamental reasons.

"We do not deny that some of these evils exist, but do deny that governmental action can cure them.

"Believe the benefits that are sought can be obtained by sticking to maximum hours and minimum wages which can be fairly well enforced.

"Have no axes to grind, and will do out best to work under whatever is finally approved. Hesitate to give unasked opinion, but think you should have it."

LOYAL SPIRIT

Note the spirit. A loyal citizen sees difficulties in a proposed "plan," and wires the chief his thought in a constructive way.

The philosophy is that unless the members of a trade are in sympathy with a government plan, that plan cannot be successfully enforced. It was this that made the prohibition experiment fail.

The logic is that uniform rules fixing prices on a basis of costs, when costs are different among individual companies, and are impossible to determine, cannot be enforced.

In its attempts to restrict competition, the recovery administration has experimented with the idea that prices should not be below costs, and many "codes" contain such a provision.

This at first glance, seems fair enough. But experience and reason both show that there are two great difficulties.

COSTS PUZZLE

The first one is that in many cases you cannot find out what cost is. Perhaps the most practical way to drive this point home is to recall the fact that hardly any two companies agree on what is the true way to figure total cost.

Try to get an industry to apply a "uniform cost system" (as I have), and you will find the difficulties. They include depreciation, interest charges, value of raw materials, etc., etc.

The fact is that the costing of particular products must often be arbitrary. It must depend, in many cases, on the price to be charged. This makes it impossible to base the price on the cost.

Companies have to sell each product at about the same price. (They certainly do under a system of price fixing). But their costs differ, and no two have the same cost.

Now whose cost is to be taken as the basis in fixing the price? You see, there is to be one price, but there are as many costs as there are companies.

SOME WOULD LOSE

If the price-fixer takes the average cost for all the companies, then those whose costs are higher must lose money.

If he takes the highest cost of all the companies, then the price must be fixed so high that consumption is checked, and some companies make a huge profit on each sale.

The consumers' advisory board of the NRA is opposing the cost price sections in many codes on the ground that they tend toward price-fixing practices which would be "intolerable" to the consumer.

LABOR DISCORD UNSETTLES STEEL

By B. E. V. LUTY

Labor disturbances in Western Pennsylvania and the West Virvinia Panhandle of a weird and unprecedented character have disturbed sentiment among steel buyers, who have had no means of gauging how much more trouble there might be. A strong repressive influence upon buying has been exerted, just as procedure under code regulations was being clarified and greater activity was promised. Sellers of steel have themselves been made less inclined to sales effort. Matters have been engaged in clearing up in the last two or three days and a freer market is in prospect.

Production of steel ingots in September is officially reported at 40.89 per cent of capacity against 49.42 per cent in August and 58.95 per cent in July, the high month. Production last week and this has been substantially uniform at slightly under 40 per cent.

There are various trends in the numerous consuming outlets for steel and the general swing in steel production in the next few weeks will depend upon which trends predominate. No decrease of more than a very few points is thought possible, and on the other hand no large increase is expected until there is railroad buying on a substantial scale or the federal building program develops some round tonnages.

No increase in demand of distinctly seasonal character has been observed in any direction. Only a small part of the seasonal increase usually expected is attributed to special wants arising on account of the time of year, increase in steel demand being related rather to seasonal increase in business activity generally, and this has been lagging on account of various influences, including labor disturbances and adoption of codes.

PRICES ADJUSTED

Last week there was a large volume of fourth quarter contracting in bars and some in shapes and plates, to take advantage of expiring prices, as last Saturday morning bars advanced from 1.60 to 1.75 cents, Pittsburgh, and plates and shapes from 1.60 to 1.70 cents.

In hot and cold rolled strips there was heavy specifying against contracts expiring September 30 as new engagements are at higher prices, and strip mills are fortified for a run at around 50 per cent for several weeks, after which a lull is expected.

Tin plate mills have specifications representing production at regular working time, 16 turns a week, approximately through next month and additional specifications are coming in. Except for two long-idle plants, mills have been running full for months. For a short time strikes curtailed production by about 9 per cent, but this influence has started to decrease. Tin plate consumption is fairly heavy, better than in any other important finished steel product, and consumers are stocking up on account of prices as there are some contracts left on the old basis of $4.25 a box, while new business is on a basis of $4.65 and a further advance is more or less expected for the first quarter of the new year, contracting for which will become permissible on December 1. The recent advance did not even cover the advance in pig tin prices while there are heavy increases in other cost items.

RAIL CUT UNDECIDED

The steel trade had been thinking of a reduction in the rail price in terms of $2 or $3 a ton, and then chiefly as a matter of policy as costs did not seem to justify any reduction, but now the railroad coordinator speaks of a reduction of not less than $5 from the price of $40 per gross ton ruling since the reduction of $3 a year ago. In the seven years through 1929 Class I roads laid new rails in replacement by an average of 1,977,773 tons a year, the quantity then dwindling to 1,517,022 tons in 1930, 984,900 tons in 1931 and 394,536 tons in 1932.

Automobile production in September is estimated at 185,000 cars and trucks in the United States and Canada, while October is forecast roughly at 145,000, against 242,559 officially reported for August, 239,628 for July and 260,645 for June, the peak month of the year. Production in the 10 months through October would total approximately 1,850,000.

Conference Board Finds Recovery Reaches World Basis

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

BUSINESS RECOVERY has not been confined to the United States. It has taken place on a world-wide basis. It started in the summer of 1932 and continued through July of this year. Later statistics are not yet available.

This summarizes a statement issued yesterday by the National Industrial Conference Board. The statement reviews the findings of the board on world economic conditions and trends.

We, in the United States, have a tendency to think of business only in terms of activities in our own country. But few countries attain prosperity for long periods unless there is a fairly general world prosperity. This makes the Conference Board's study important to us.

* * *

Low Point Reached In Summer of 1932

THE LOW POINT of the world depression was reached in the summer of 1932. The world wide improvement occurred largely in the last four months of that year. In 1933 business recovery continued throughout the month of July. Statistics for August are not yet available and it is impossible to say whether or not the rest of the world has experienced a recession in business activity similar to that which occurred in the United States during August and September.

Coinciding with this improvement in business activity in the principal industrial countries of the world, there occurred a recovery in world prices of raw materials and foodstuffs—wheat, sugar, coffee, cotton, rubber, silk, tin, wool, hides and leather. In the last quarter of 1932, these prices again turned downward, but for the first time since 1929 prices of most staple commodities at the end of the year remained above the low points for the year. The decline in wholesale prices in practically all countries of the world was either arrested or greatly slowed down in the second half of 1932.

* * *

Drop in World Trade Checked

THE CONFERENCE Board found that the decline in the volume and the value of world trade also was stopped in the last half of 1932, while the League of Nations index of world prices of internationally traded commodities moved in a horizontal direction. Security prices either moved horizontally or turned upward in the second half of the year in all financial markets.

Restriction of bank credit, due to the desire for increased liquidity, came to an end in the second half of 1932 and eliminated one of the powerful forces of deflation. Central bank rates of discount and open-market interest rates for short-term funds were reduced to the lowest levels since the World War. A tremendous volume of idle funds has accumulated in the principal financial centers and is available to finance an extensive business revival.

The volume of unemployment remained high throughout 1932, but the increase in unemployment was stopped.

The relations between creditor and debtor countries were fundamentally altered. The debtor nations were able to adjust their balances of merchandise trade to the situation created by the complete cessation of international lending. Practically without exception, the debtor nations have converted large import surpluses into considerable export surpluses on merchandise account. This was accomplished through a great reduction in the total volume and value of foreign trade, imports having been reduced more drastically than exports. The creditor nations, on the other hand, with the exception of the United States, continued to maintain large import surpluses, while the American surplus of commodity exports was drastically reduced. These shifts in the balances of merchandise trade prepared the ground for a new movement of international funds and facilitated a recovery of prices.

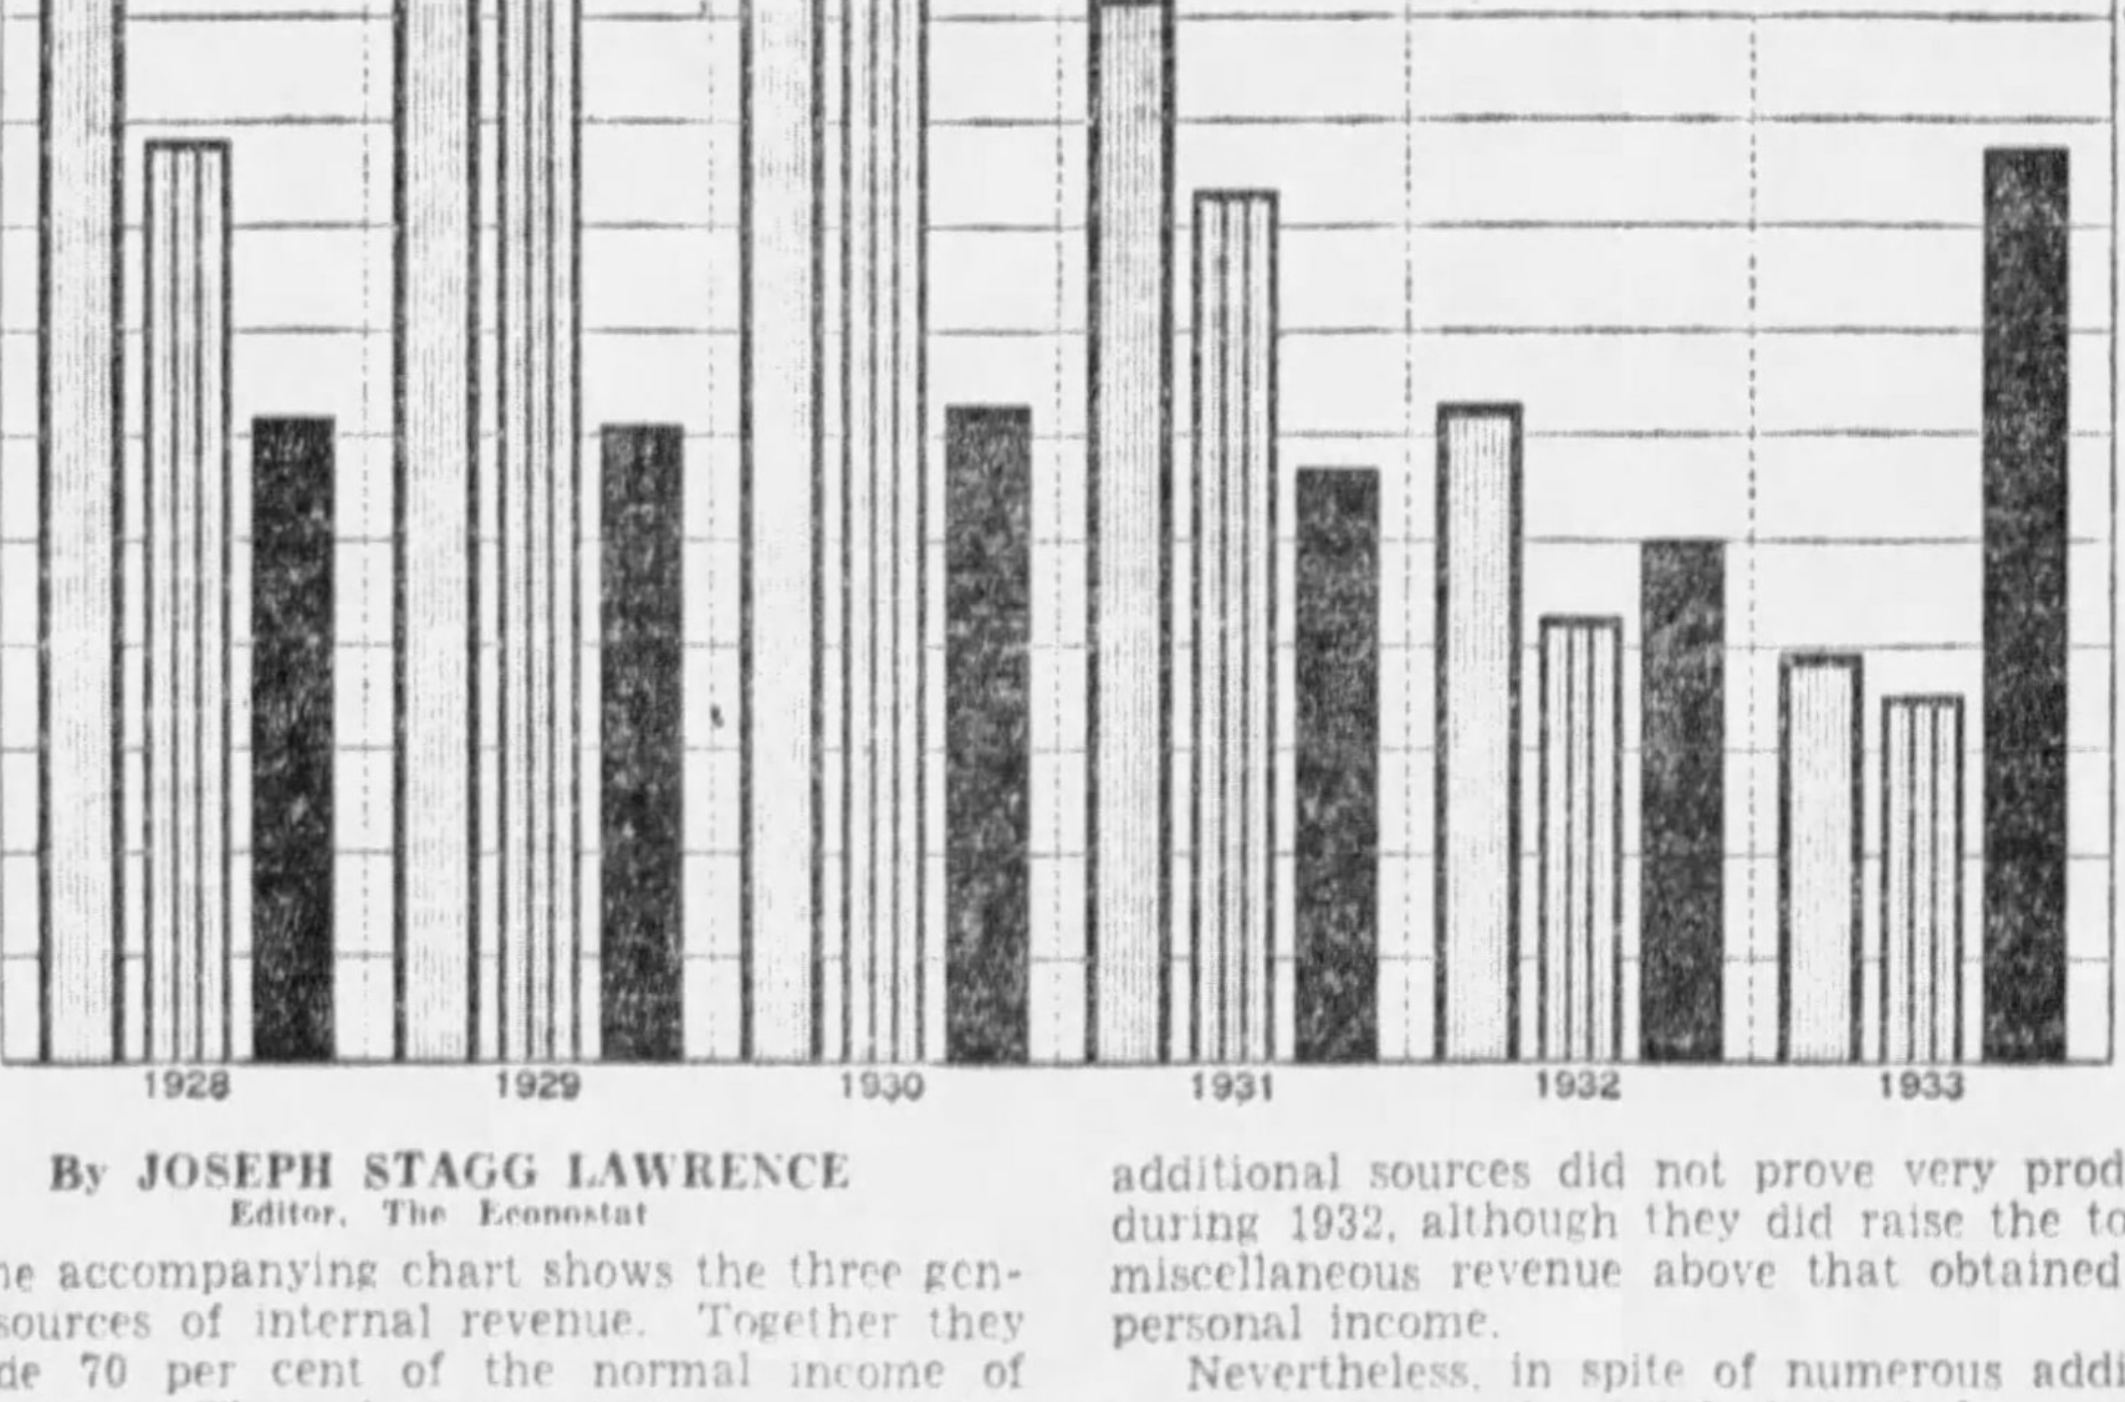
Nuisance Tax Revenues Rise While Other Sources Shrink



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

Editor, The Econostat

The accompanying chart shows the three general sources of internal revenue. Together they provide 70 per cent of the normal income of Uncle Sam. The only item which is excluded is the revenue derived from import duties. That depends largely upon the rates charged and the volume of our imports. Internal revenue collections respond directly to the fluctuations of business activity and the prosperity of the country.

It may be noted that there is a steady decline in corporation and personal income taxes during the four years of the depression. This, of course, is directly the result of reduced earnings by corporations and a decline in personal incomes. To some extent the revenue derived from miscellaneous internal sources is likewise affected by the fortunes of business in the country.

The departure of the black bar from the trend of the other two is the result entirely of efforts on the part of Congress to provide special revenue to fill the rapidly growing gap between income and outgo which started with the deficit during the fiscal year ending June, 1930. These additional sources did not prove very productive during 1932, although they did raise the total of miscellaneous revenue above that obtained from personal income.

Nevertheless, in spite of numerous additional nuisance taxes the total derived from miscellaneous sources was less in 1932 than in 1931. It illustrates the extreme difficulty of attempting to increase taxes in a community that is already overburdened during a period when business is falling off.

As a result of the heroic efforts of the last Congress the total of miscellaneous internal revenue was raised (using round numbers) from $501,000,000 to $873,000,000. At the same time corporation taxes declined from $630,000,000 to $394,000,000 and individual income taxes from $427,000,000 to $353,000,000.

The chart indicates very clearly the only desirable solution of the government's fiscal distress—namely, an improvement in general business resulting in a rise in corporate profits and personal incomes, which will restore the volume of tax payments to the adequate levels prevailing in the years before the depression.

Berlin Racing Clubs Bar Non-Aryans

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Non-Aryan gentleman riders and drivers were barred from horse or trotting race courses by an order of the Prussian minister of the interior to racing clubs.

The order, however, will not interfere with non-Aryan racehorse owners.

Policeman's Brother Accidentally Shot

Louis Erfort, 27, brother of City Policeman Joseph Erfort, was in South Side Hospital today in a serious condition after having accidentally shot himself.

Erfort told police he had finished cleaning his revolver and was about to replace it on a shelf. It caught on a curtain and was discharged.

22 Still Missing In California Fire

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 7.—(AP.)—Twenty-two men remained on the missing list in the Griffith Park fire despite efforts of authorities today to account for them. The bodies of 28 victims were found in the fire-swept canyon, and all but four of these have been identified.

5 Die, 15 Wounded In Mexican Rioting

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 7.—(INS.)—The agrarian dispute flared anew in the State of Michoacan today following a riot in which five were killed and 15 wounded by gun fire.

HUNTING PERILS FOREST CORPS

What to do about the safety of the Citizens' Conservation Corps, many of whom are billeted, and working, in Pennsylvania's big game territory, during the hunting season, is distributing game protectors and hunters.

The game protectors at their quarterly pistol shoot at Brookville suggested that the federal government grant them a 15-day furlough during the deer season beginning December 1. Another suggestion was that a restricted area around the forest army camps be declared.

The game protectors looked with disfavor upon the latter plan, while John M. Phillips, former president of the State Game Commission, with an eye to the revenues from hunting licenses, scorns the furlough plan, but favors the restricted areas.

NOTICE OF SALE OF BONDS

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the City Controller of the City of Pittsburgh until the 17th day of October, 1933, at 10:00 a. m., eastern standard time, for the purchase of the following issues of bonds of said City:

$300,000.00 Public Work Relief Bonds, 1933, Series B.

All of said bonds will be dated as of October 1, 1933, and will mature in twenty (20) equal installments on October 1, of each year. Said bonds will bear interest at the rate of four and one-quarter (4¼%) per centum per annum, payable semi-annually on the first days of April and October in each year without deduction for any taxes which may be levied thereon by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, pursuant to any present or future law.

Said $300,000.00 Public Work Relief Bonds, 1933, Series B, are issued to provide funds for providing supplies, materials, equipment, labor and supervision (including engineering expenses) for the improvement of streets, parks, playgrounds, wharves, sewers, water lines, bridges and other public properties of the City of Pittsburgh, the labor to be provided from among the unemployed, and were authorized by the Electors at an election held April 26, 1932.

Said bonds will be coupon bonds of the denomination of one thousand ($1,000.00) dollars, exchangeable at the option of the holder at any time for a registered bond or bonds of the same maturity and of the denomination of one hundred ($100.00) dollars or a multiple thereof not exceeding the aggregate principal amount of the coupon bond or bonds surrendered in exchange therefor.

Unless all bids are rejected the said bonds will be sold to the highest responsible bidder complying with the terms of sale. No bid for such bonds at less than par and accrued interest from the date of said bonds to the date of delivery will be accepted. The right is reserved to reject all bids and any bid not complying with the provisions hereof will be rejected. Any bidder may condition his bid upon the award to him of all or none of the bonds for which he bids.

All bidders are required to deposit a certified check drawn to the order of the City of Pittsburgh, on a National Bank or Trust Company, for two per centum (2%) of the principal amount of bonds bid for. Checks of unsuccessful bidders will be returned upon the award of the bonds. No interest will be allowed upon the amount of the check of the successful bidder and such check will be retained and applied in part payment for the bonds or to secure the City against any loss resulting from the failure of the bidder to comply with the terms of his bid.

The City of Pittsburgh reserves the right to deliver to the successful bidder temporary typewritten or printed bonds, in the form of one temporary bond for each issue, or one bond for each maturity of each issue, which shall be substantially in the same form as the definitive bonds, with appropriate omissions, insertions and variations as may be required. Until their exchange for definitive coupon bonds, the temporary bonds shall be in full force and effect according to their terms, and shall bear interest from October 1.

Proposals should be addressed to James P. Kerr, City Controller, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and enclosed in a sealed envelope, marked on the outside "Proposal for Bonds." Bids must be made upon blank forms which may be obtained from the City Controller.

The successful bidder will be furnished with the opinion of Messrs. Reed, Smith, Shaw & McClay, of Pittsburgh, that bonds are binding and legal obligations of the City of Pittsburgh.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The gangster sprang from his chair, to be hurled back into it. "You can't get away with a thing like that!" Murtoch cried.

"I can't? What makes you think that? You be a nice little boy and listen to me and I'll show you how it can be done. You had a quarrel with Gertie Waxted in a speakeasy tonight. She wouldn't be as friendly as you wanted her to be. She told you she was Crelliman's girl and wouldn't have a thing to do with you. Why, the barkeep will testify that you got so ugly he had to throw you out.

"You told Gertie you'd done enough of Crelliman's dirty work, and now you'd do a little of your own. She told me and I told the police, and we all came down here to keep you from killing Crelliman. We got here too late. We got here and opened the door just in time to see you shooting out the window.

We looked out and saw Crelliman dead on the porch of his penthouse. Why, you ought to be glad, Murtoch. Gertie turned you down for Crelliman. It ought to be worth frying to have Crelliman bumped off."

The pasty face of the gangster was ash-white. He licked dry lips with his tongue. "I'll say it's a plant," he said.

Durant laughed, and the quality of his mirth made even the hardened detectives, who knew that it was histrionic, shudder. "Of course you will," he said, "but with four witnesses against you, how far are you going to get with your story of a plant?"

"But you're stuck on her. She's been two-timing you. I'll tell that."

Durant shook his head pityingly. "Of course I'm stuck on her; that's why I'm killing Crelliman. But I never met the little girl until 36 hours ago. Who's going to believe that I fell so hard for her that I wanted to kill someone because she left me? You've been in on plenty of frames, Murtoch. Why not take it nice and easy? You were bound to get it sooner or later. A man can't be a killer without getting killed. What difference does it make to you whether it's a bullet or the chair, inasmuch as it's coming to you anyway? I thought you had more nerve, Murtoch."

GUNMAN FRIGHTENED

"You're repeating yourself, Murtoch," said Durant. "I've shown you how simply it's going to be done."

"Suppose it was? Suppose she told me that she was going out to see Tony Gazotti or some other friend of hers and I pretended to believe her — what then? You see, if they trace the call, it will be believed that you made it. Gertie will keep her mouth closed about the whole affair. She won't say that I phoned. And if she does—but she won't.

"You see, Murtoch, there are angles to this frame that you don't understand. And I haven't time or inclination to waste my breath explaining them to you. You're not appreciative, Murtoch. I should think that the sheer artistry of the thing would appeal to you.

"That's the trouble with illiterate people like you. Beauty appeals to them only when it's something they can use. Now, if you had framed me as beautifully as this, I'd be lost in admiration of your brilliance. I can see that it would be unpleasant to go to the chair because of the frame, but the delicacy of the plan, the shining glory of its execution, would almost rob me of resentment. I'm disappointed in you, Murtoch."

"Are you men going to let him get away with this? Murtoch appealed to Stevens and the two plainclothes men.

COMPLETE FRAME-UP

Durant shook his head, impatiently this time. "Don't you understand? Didn't I make it clear? Crelliman has plenty on these gentlemen. He's been so incautious as to threaten them that if they didn't do certain things he'd expose the fact that they have accepted bribes from him. A poor sport Crelliman. Why, I know of one man who did a killing for Crelliman and went to the chair for it.

"He couldn't prove that Crelliman was involved, and Crelliman wanted him out of the way. It was just as simple to let the state get rid of the man as do it himself. And because he's made his poor followers obey him through threats of exposure he thinks he can do the same kind of thing to detectives of the City of New York. Now, do you begin to appreciate the niceties of detail?"

Murtoch wiped his lips. "I'm going nuts. Lemme get a drink, for God's sake!"

"Maybe you need a little jab of the needle," suggested Durant. "But that's just too bad. I know how your nerves are, and I'm genuinely sorry for you, Murtoch. But you see, we have to get rid of Crelliman. Naturally, we don't want to be accused of the killing. And mysterious killings, without a victim handy, lead to inquiries. So it's better for us if we have a man all ready to take the rap. You'll enjoy it, Murtoch, after I've killed Crelliman, when my friends grab your hands and you realize that they are forcing you to put your own fingerprints on my gun.

"There's a little touch that ought to appeal to you. Honestly, I defy anyone in the history of crime to point to a more complete frame-up than this. Let me check them off for you." With his right forefinger he tapped his left forefinger. "Point one: motive. You're in love with Gertie Waxted and she turned you down tonight for Crelliman. Point two." He touched the middle finger of his left hand. "Opportunity. Your window overlooks Crelliman's porch. Point three." He touched the third finger of his left hand. "We entered the room just as you fired the shot."

FLAW ELIMINATED

He turned to Stevens. "Would it be more artistic if we said that we entered the room just before he fired the shot? . . . No, we don't have to see you do the actual shooting, Murtoch. Crelliman will be dead and your fingerprints will be on the gun. Sometimes the beauty of an effect, of a perfect whole, is marred by a puerile insistence on petty detail. We'll let it go as I said first. We hear the shot and open the door.

"Oh, I forgot one little thing, Lieut. Stevens. Naturally, Murtoch struggles. We beat him up, and that should be a very thorough job." He stopped and lighted a cigaret. His eyes narrowed. "It's funny," he said thoughtfully, "that the most perfect plan suddenly shows a flaw."

"You bet it shows a flaw!" cried Murtoch. "Why—when I'm on the stand and tell this story——"

Durant stopped him with a gesture. "That's the idea that just came to me. Not that any jury would believe your fantastic tale. But why have a jury? Lieut. Stevens, you and I are both taxpayers. What right have we to burden the city with the expense of a murder trial? No right at all. So we won't have one. In the struggle that follows our entrance into the room the murderer is killed. He puts up a battle. He shoots at us and so we kill him." He took the cigaret from his mouth and beamed upon his auditors. "Simple, compact, thoroughly reasonable and admirably economical. So that's the way we do it."

CRELLIMAN APPEARS

Again Murtoch sprang from his chair; the two detectives thrust him back into the seat. A thick hand was clapped over his mouth.

"That's right; hold him," said Durant. "Put out the lights, Stevens. Crelliman's on his porch now. That two-timing little wench, Waxted, is with him."

As the lights went out he approached the window more closely. Even in the gloom Murtoch could see Durant pull a gun from his pocket. There was a moon, and its light faintly showed his action.

"Murtoch," said Durant, "It's only fair that you should have a chance to see me kill Crelliman. You don't like him any more than I do. You wanted Gertie as much as I did. You're going to be dead in a couple of minutes and it ought to cheer your end to know that Crelliman went before you. Bring him over here, boys."

With the big hand still gripped across his mouth, Murtoch was pushed to the window. There, on the porch below, stood Crelliman and Gertie Waxted. A muffled sound came from the gangster.

"Maybe he's got something to say before his lights go out," said Durant. "Take him away from the window. If he screams, shoot him first and I'll get Crelliman right away. Guns ready? Let him speak."

HENRY CLAY URGING HIS "OMNIBUS" BILL IN THE SENATE (1850)

With the expansion of United States territory through the Mexican war (1848) and the treaty with Great Britain (1846) conflicts arose between the slave-holding and the free states; the former wanted to extend slavery. Henry Clay with his "omnibus" bill effected a compromise, postponing the Civil War. The bill (modified) declared California a free state, Texas with restricted territory as slave-holding state, and the other Mexican cessions were made available for slavery. BATTLE AT PLASSEY, INDIA (1757)

European countries acquired colonies mostly to satisfy economic needs, though political and religious issues often were decisive. Spanish and Portuguese colonies flourished during the sixteenth century; Dutch in the seventeenth, British and French colonization got impetus with the eighteenth.

In India the British won supremacy over the French interests in the battle of Plassey, fought under the command of Robert Clive, previously connected with the East India Company (British) against the Bengal ruler allied with France. (Ellis: Story of the Greatest Nations.) (World History)

SULPHURIC ACID MANUFACTURE, LEAD CHAMBER PROCESS

Sulphuric acid (H2SO4) manufacture consists essentially of producing sulphur trioxide (SO3) that, with water, gives sulphuric acid. (SO3 + H2O = H2SO4). SO3 is made from sulphur dioxide (SO2) by help of catalysts (contact process; see issue of October 5, or chamber process, diagram above).

In the chamber process a gaseous catalyst, nitrogen dioxide (NO2) is used, made from ammonia and air led through a platinum gauze catalyst in a separate chamber, not shown here. The reactions to obtain NO2 are: 4NH3 (ammonia) + 5O2 (oxygen) = 6H2O (water) + 4NO (nitrogen oxide) and 2NO + O2 = 2NO2 (nitrogen dioxide). These nitrogen oxides are mixed with concentrated sulphuric acid forming "nitrosyl" acid that is used to carry the catalyst into the Glover Tower, where under influence of water it liberates NO and NO2 ready for catalytic action.

Diagram above: In the Glover Tower the sulphur dioxide, flue-gases and air coming from the sulphur burner at the bottom meet with the nitrogen oxides and sulphuric acid solution into which the "nitrosyl" acid (coming from the top) had split. Already in the Glover Tower is part of the sulphur dioxide (SO2) converted into SO3 and subsequently into H2SO4 by following reactions: SO2 + NO2 = SO3 + NO and SO3 + H2O = H2SO4 (sulphuric acid).

The conversion is continued in the three to five lead-covered chambers and finished in a Gay Lussac Tower, from the bottom of which sulphuric acid is tapped off, 65 to 78% strong.

While the contact process furnishes concentrated sulphuric acid, the chamber process gives only a dilution—one suitable to make soluble phosphate fertilizer from phosphate rock. For other purposes the chamber acid has to be concentrated by evaporating the water. (Holmes: Introductory College Chemistry)

RED SPRUCE (Picea Rubra) (General Science)

The red spruce is of the pinaceae family. The leaves are crowded yellowish green, about half inch long, four-sided. The staminate flowers are reddish, oval, sessile; the pistillate cylindrical, consisting of rounded thin scales. The fruit, an elongated cone, matures in one season. The cone scales are reddish brown, rounded and contain the winged seeds. Range of the red spruce is from Newfoundland to Georgia, striving on mountain slopes, drained upland and on the margin of swamps and streams. The wood is light, soft, not strong and used for paper pulp, sounding boards of musical instruments and also for construction. (Illick: Pennsylvania Trees)

THE STRUCTURE OF PLANT STEMS

Multiplication of the cells from the growing point of the shoot (bud) upward brings about the plant stem. The familiar three tissue systems (see issues of October 3 and 5) namely epidermis, cortex and stele, constitute the framework of the stem.

It's All Old Stuff in Europe

Every racket we have in this noble land has been worked in Europe until its elbows came through.

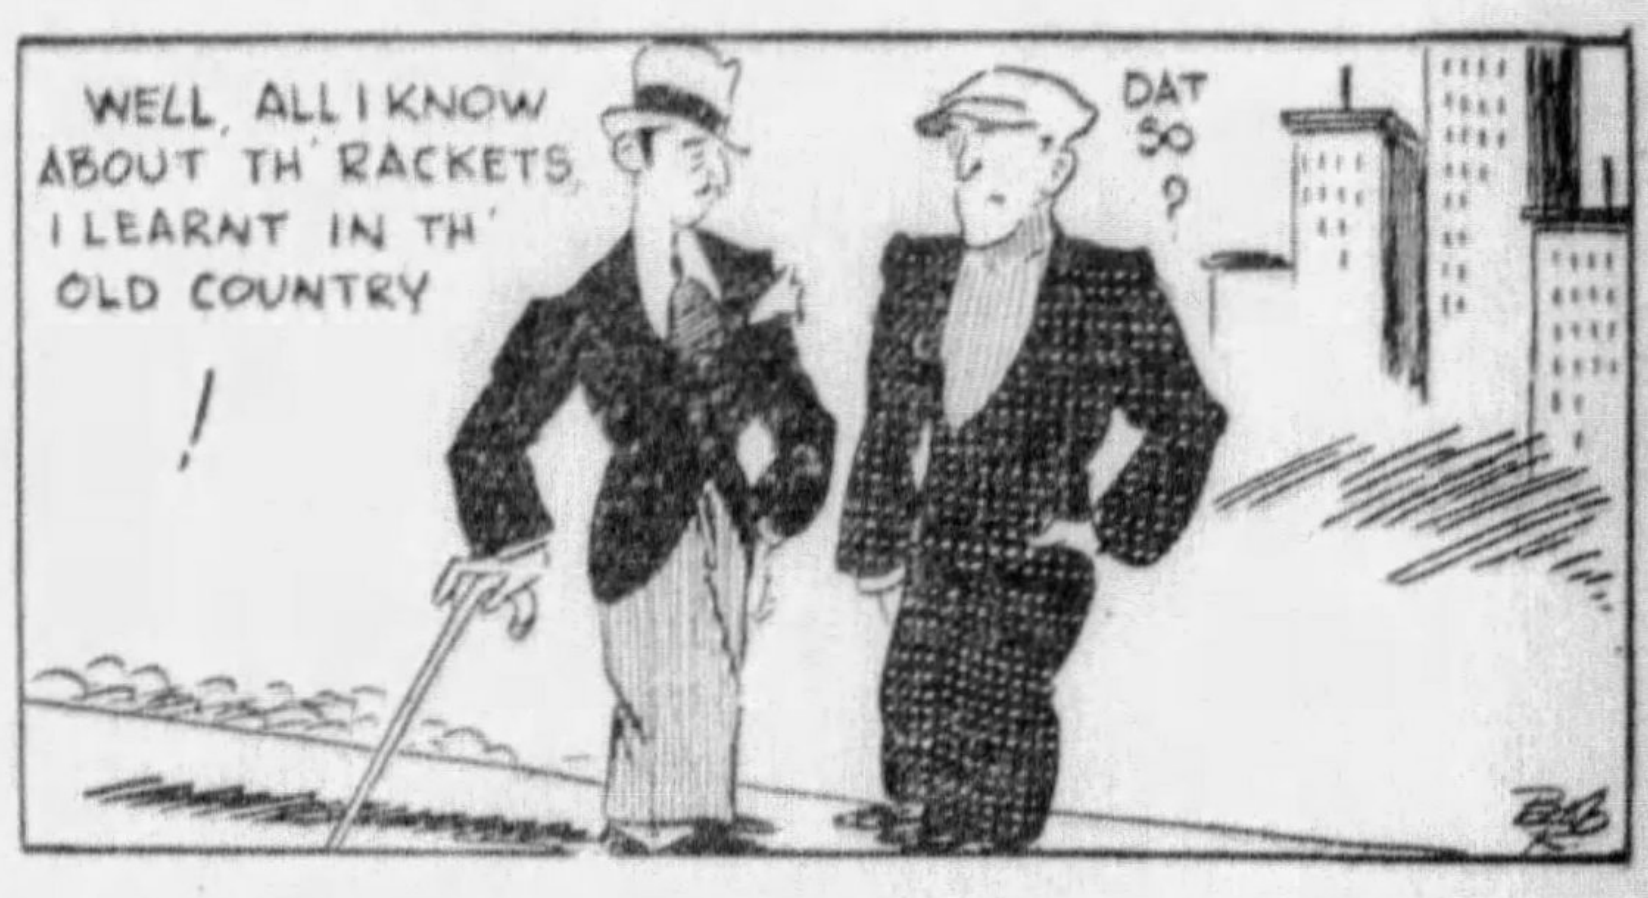
The shell game, three-card monte, ransom, chicanery, extortion and a thousand other ways of spending a rainy evening are old continental customs. All we did was to polish them up a bit.

The Barcelona copperinos caught an American bozo who lived in Madrid and was born in London. He lathered and shaved a bank over there. They have been stealing money in Europe ever since the board of directors hung their depositors up by the thumbs.

Did Venice claim that Napoleon was a Newark boy? And didn't some king put the snatch on Richard the Lion Hearted when Dicky was hitch-hiking back from the Crusades?

Those Riffs didn't do bad a few years ago. What was that master mind's name? Right, it was Rasuili, dead or alive, or a neat blending of both. The Chinese bandits around Manchuria didn't go to night school in Cicero.

Why do the European peasants bury their money in the ground? Why don't they hang it in trees or twine it around a trellis? Can it be that the people near Paris figure they are too close to Kansas City? Nope, they plant their golden cabbage way down deep because the Moscow and Budapest slickers all ride bicycles.



WELL, ALL I KNOW ABOUT TH' RACKETS I LEARNT IN TH' OLD COUNTRY
DAT SO ?

Smuggling and bootlegging are fine arts over there. The ancient letters of Marque and Reprisal were simply diplomas entitling you to steal. The oldtime robber barons along the Rhine were always on the loose, and never home answering their fan mail. A traveler's life wasn't worth a hiccup in a butcher shop.

We ain't forgetting the neighbor's children in Corsica, Tibet and the Balkans. Robin Hood and Fra Diabalo are now both grand operas. But once, they were wanted by every police chief who could walk faster than a gander.

Was Swiftnicks a lad from the Bronx? And did Jack Shepherd get his ideas from Houdini? And don't overlook the local boy who stole the crown jewels from the tower. Say, they built big jails in Europe long before America had an overflow.

Every guy captured at the Battle of Flodden Floe was held for ransom. It's an old European custard. If there is any complaints to be registered with the patent office we are the ones to do it. Think of how long the capers were going on before we cashed in on them.

The Ambridge Riots

The Beaver County Authorities Are Not Noted for Respect for Law—Comment on Local News.

There would be fewer misgivings over the manner in which the Beaver County authorities are dealing with the strike at Ambridge if the public could have faith in their respect for law. It is fresh in memory, however, that some of this same crew of public officials only a few months ago kidnaped scores of Negroes against whom a trivial charge of disorderly conduct had been made and tried to expel them from the state.

They "shanghaied" the Negroes rather than take the trouble of dealing with them in a legal manner. Attorney General William A. Schnader, in a formal opinion based on an investigation by John D. Meyer, formerly United States attorney, branded the conduct of the officials involved in the kidnaping as criminal, and Gov. Gifford Pinchot demanded, but in vain, that District Attorney A. B. DeCastrique, of Beaver County, prosecute them.

This same DeCastrique, who treated the brutal kidnaping of the Negroes as a joke, was a leader of the deputies who fired into the strikers at Ambridge Thursday. That there was need of stern measures is not denied; but we could have more confidence that blood was not shed unnecessarily if the deputies were led by officials who had respect for law and did not lose their heads.

The arrest of Harvey O'Connor, author of "Mellon's Millions," in connection with the Ambridge strike, appears to have been utterly unjustified. No charge was made against him, yet he was thrown into jail and denied the privilege of bail, and his house was ransacked without a search warrant. When he obtained a hearing through a writ of habeas corpus not a scintilla of evidence could be adduced against him, and he was, of course, discharged.

In the words of Talleyrand, the arrest of O'Connor was worse than a crime—it was a blunder. As he himself says, it may be good for the sale of 10,000 more copies of "Mellon's Millions," with its scarcely veiled attack on capitalism. The Sun-Telegraph has no liking for Reds or their doctrines, and we feel that the authorities are playing into their hands and furnishing them ammunition when high-handed or lawless methods are used in coping with them.

The Pennsylvania Historical Commission, a bureau of the Department of Public Instruction, announces discovery of "the oldest evidence of Indian occupancy yet uncovered in Pennsylvania" in excavations at Spanish Hill, near Athens, Bradford County. The Indians who left these remains lived at a period so remote that we can scarcely expect to learn much of their history.

While the discovery of ancient bones and potsherds is of intense interest to archaeologists, the public cannot become very enthusiastic over it because of the absence of the human element. The average person does not care for impersonal history, but desires names and individual deeds and stories of love and war and romance.

The scene of the Ambridge riots is historic ground. The Harmonists, members of a German religious community, tilled those fields many years ago. And before the Harmonists came it was an Indian village, known as Logstown, part of the domain of Queen Aliquippa. On October 17, 1932, Fort McIntosh Chapter of the D. A. R. unveiled a bronze tablet in front of the A. M. Byers Company's Ambridge plant, setting forth some of the interesting facts.

Near the point where the deputies swarmed through to attack the strikers, Conrad Weiser, an agent for the Pennsylvania colonial government, in 1748 negotiated a treaty with the Indians, which opened the regions west of the mountains to English colonization. Washington stopped at Logstown for a council with the Indians in 1753 on his return from Lake Erie. He gave Queen Aliquippa a coat and a bottle of rum, and it has been recorded that she preferred the latter.

Within a half-mile of the scene of Thursday's riots Gen. "Mad Anthony" Wayne in 1793 trained an army for a campaign against the Indians—a campaign which resulted in the utter defeat of the savages in the battle of Fallen Timbers on August 20, 1794. The army which encamped near where Ambridge now stands was known as the American Legion, and the site of the camp is still called Legionville in its honor.

Neil Swanson, a former Pittsburgh newspaperman, has just published a novel, "The Judas Tree," which deals with those stirring days of the Indian wars in Pennsylvania. But what a wealth of material remains at the disposal of historians and novelists! Can any more romantic figure be found, for instance, than Genevieve Loverhill—"Loverhill of the Rangers"?

She was the daughter of Abe Loverhill, who is thought to have been a descendant of one of that mysterious band of Jews who established themselves on the upper Schuylkill in 1702 with the avowed intention of converting to Judaism the Indians, whom they believed to be a lost tribe of Israel.

To avenge herself for the killing of her two brothers by the Indians, and also for the sake of the bounty on Indian scalps offered by the Colonial Legislature, Genevieve Loverhill, a wild mountain girl, joined the Rangers and for three years hunted the savages relentlessly, killing hundreds of them. She rode a white horse that had belonged to Conrad Weiser.

Or is there any more touching story in history than that of Regina Hartman? In 1755, when she was a tiny tot, the Indians killed her father and brother, burned the house, and carried her off as a captive. After defeating the Indians at the battle of Bushy Run on July 5, 1763, Col. Henry Bouquet compelled them to bring all their captives to Fort Pitt. Among them was Regina.

Regina's mother, seeking her daughter among the released captives, found a dark-skinned girl who could only speak the Indian language. It seemed impossible to establish recognition. Then the mother thought of a German hymn that she had taught her baby, beginning—

> Bin ich in meiner Einsamkeit."

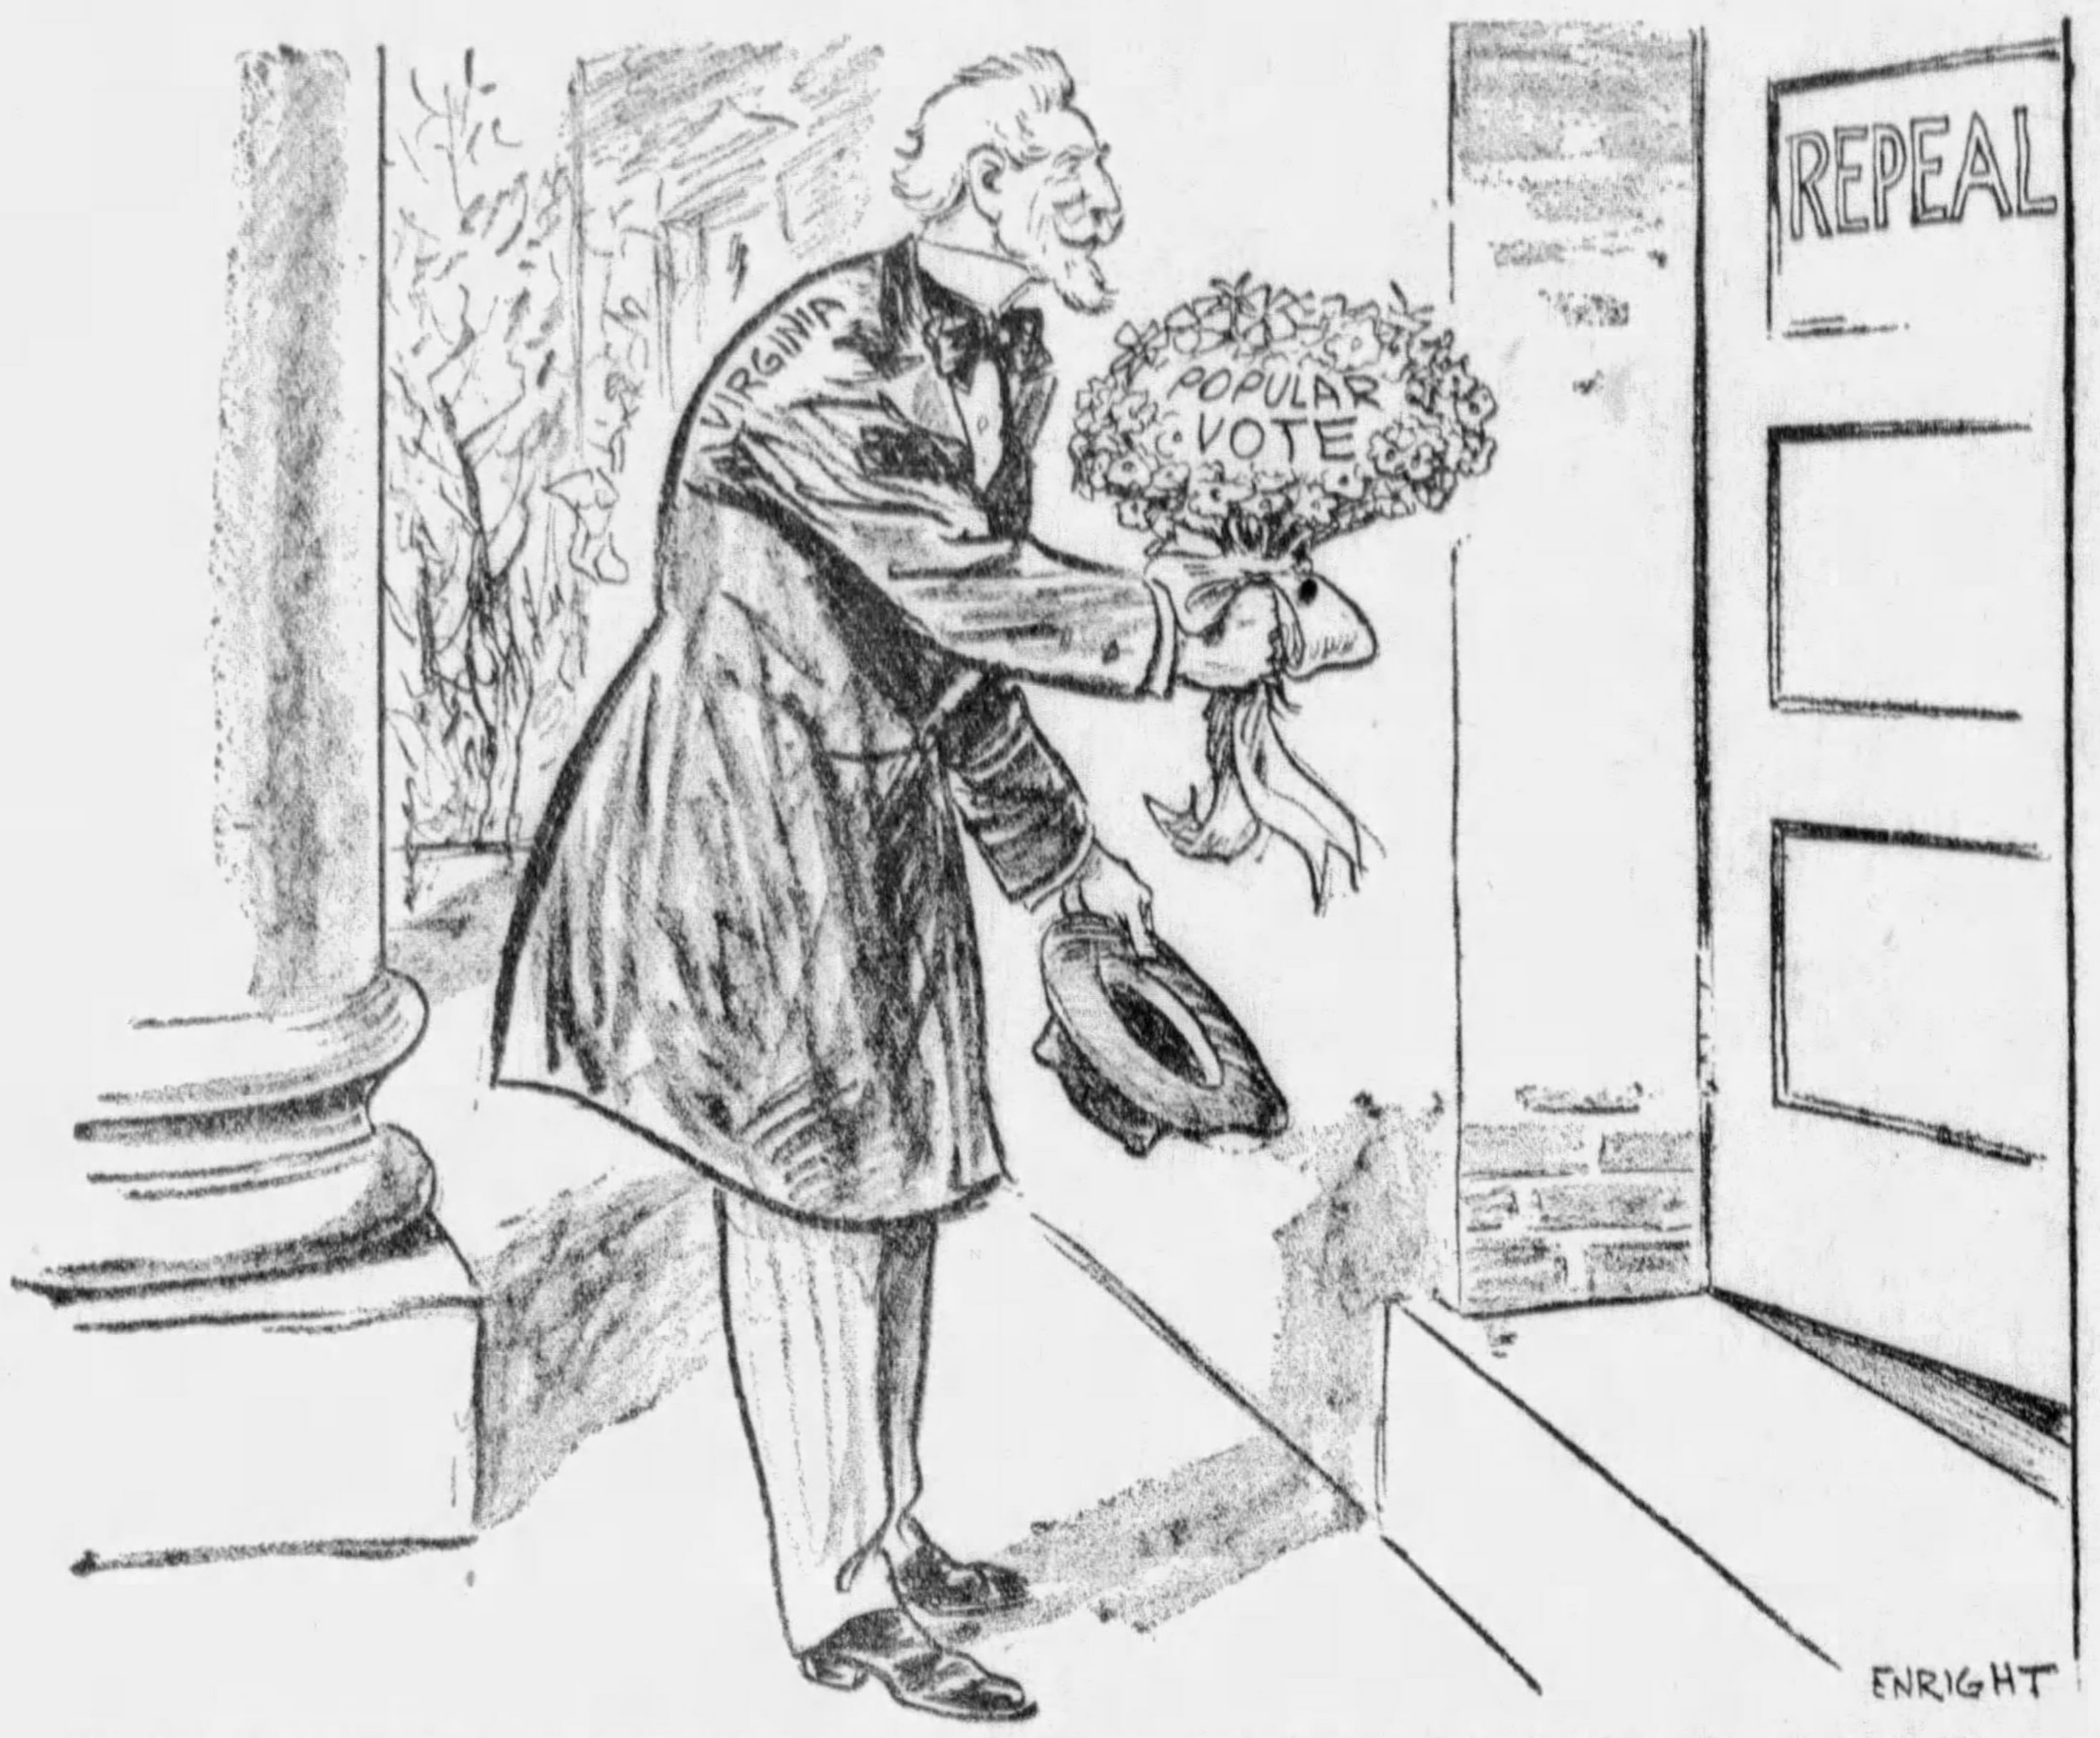
An Old Southern Gentleman Comes to the Party

(Copyright, 1933.)



The Old Dominion State has made the score 32 to 0 for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

In that State, we recall, Gov. Pollard, for years a Dry, was opposed to a special repeal election because of the expense.

A petition signed by two-thirds of the members required him to call a special session of the Legislature, by which Tuesday's election was ordered.

Gov. Pollard yielded gracefully. He would not oppose public opinion in his own State.

More than that, with 31 States on record for repeal and none opposed, Gov. Pollard did another graceful thing.

Asserting that he would himself vote for repeal rather that oppose the public opinion of the nation, he asked that every Virginia elector do likewise.

On October 10 Florida votes. On November 7 five other States, including Pennsylvania, will go to the polls.

Marry-Go-Round

The Sweet-and-Low-Down

There are still some girls who adhere to the theory that to give a man all the kisses he wants, will make him want more. But no man ever wanted more of anything, once he was fed up with it—particularly a woman's affection.

* * *

A woman may not think that she needs any man's shoulder to weep on, these days; but a man simply must have somebody to whom he can go home and say "cock-a-doodle-do." Other men may listen to his troubles, but only a woman who loves him will actually enjoy listening when he talks about his triumphs.

LET ME TELL YOU WHAT I DID TO DAY
I KNOW IT WAS WONDERFUL DEAR

Somehow, the more money a young couple start out with, the more things they seem to find to quarrel about. After the butcher, the grocer and the landlord have been paid, there isn't much left of a $30 salary to wrangle over.

* * *

Love, like a common cold, simply can't be diagnosed or accounted for, because no two people who mention "love" are speaking of the same emotion.

* * *

Women are going feminine—but they have a long way to go. Clothes may make the woman—but they don't make her feminine, if she has a hard-shell manner, a husky stride and a hard-boiled laugh.

* * *

The only women who seem to remember what romantic love was like are those who remember what buttonhooks, rolling pins and hatpins were for.

WELL ALL OUR BILLS ARE PAID
THAT DOESN'T LEAVE ANYTHING TO WRANGLE OVER EH DEAR

If an actress can have an understudy and a writer can use a "ghost," why can't a married woman occasionally have somebody to "sub" for her on the 24-hour job of being a good, devoted wife?

* * *

A woman wants her wedding and her funeral to be beautiful and impressive; but a man never bothers about his, probably because he knows that he'll be totally unconscious at both of them.

* * *

Isn't It So?

It's a sad mistake to judge a man by what he gets instead of by what he earns. He may get more than he earns.

PHILADELPHIA DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—In ripe serenity, Philadelphia engenders a feeling of depth, excellent breeding, poise. No one would hesitate to say: "I am a Philadelphian." Driving in, there was a jingle of thoughts—Ben Franklin, scrapple, Poe's tragic days, Liberty Bell and Walt Whitman.

There is charm in the city's contrasts. No American park is so beautiful as Fairmont. Few streets so cheap-john as Eighth. A second-hand shop becomes "Mike's Almost New Store." A hospital facade engraved: "Think not the beautiful doing of thy soul perish unremembered. They abide forever."

Outwardly it's as spic and puritanical as the crossing cop's white cap. Or the statue of William Penn. Yet there is caprice. Any roving journalist knows there are assignments as exciting here as in Chicago or New York. I notice the Hotel Vendig's beacon remained in the downtown silhouette.

Any night in its grill in the old days might be found George M. Cohan, Raymond Hitchcock, Montgomery and Stone, Lew Dockstader, Sam Bernard, Willie Collier and other troupers playing here. Mimes who jested of Philadelphia's sleepiness looked forward to a run here.

* * *

One of the first persons seen coming into the city was a Japanese letter carrier of whom we inquired a direction. It was as though Philadelphia with a sly sense of humor ranged him on the outskirts to confound Bugs Baer's gag about the local letter carrier being mistakenly shot for a Confederate soldier.

* * *

Philadelphians should be—if they are not—proud of their venerable restaurants. I refer to those especially in the terminal market zone, as good and interesting as those fringing Les Halles in Paris. No swank, but rugged food for robust appetites. One in particular where we dined had the roomy barniness of a skating ring. There were table-side hatracks, waiters who could sigh over changes in the neighborhood and a statuesque Clara Walsh kind of cashier who said, "Thank yez."

* * *

After dark, bustling streets such as Broad, Chestnut and Market are abandoned to scattering strollers and lilac-breasted pigeons. One almost expects to hear the ancient night watch boom: "All is well!" But Philadelphia is not abed. It's merely indoors. This urge for behind the shutters is especially pronounced in the suburbs, where grandeur and aloofness, the Biddles and Drexels reign.

* * *

Yet through all its plutocracy is a nickelodeon thread. It's the birthplace of oatmeal. The automat was born here and Philadelphia was slipping nickels into slots for food long before New York regarded the experiment a 10-day wonder.

* * *

I tried to find Ray Rohn, Ned Deletombe and the brick house on Brandywine street where Edgar Allen Poe labored unsuccessfully to nurse his stricken Virginia to health. But the addresses of all escaped me. Poe's house is where he reputedly wrote "The Raven" and also many short stories including "The Gold Bug." But it was late and a wayfarer, asked, scratched his head, and replied: "I don't know. I've only lived here a few years."

* * *

He was, of course, a foreigner. For was it not Christopher Morley who wrote: "Every man is a foreigner in Philadelphia until he has lived there three generations?"

* * *

Leaving Philadelphia over the magnificent Delaware Bridge toward Camden I turned suddenly cut-uppish and asked John, the chauffeur, in the middle of the structure to turn back. They collect toll only at the Camden end and I wanted to see if it were possible to ride the length of the bridge free. We returned about 50 yards when a cloud of motorcycles surrounded us. What's the big idea? Getting funny, eh? In piping tweet I explained it was a bit of fooling, you know commissioner, a gag. Well, it would cost me a $50 fine and a night in the jug. And having scared me silly, they waved me on to pay the customary 25 cents. And had a good laugh for themselves, the mugs!

* * *

O, yes, before departure we passed the Philadelphia mint. I signaled the driver to stop and back up to it. Then I got out, stood reverently unhatted. After a long stretch of motoring—four weeks and two days to be precise—I felt very grateful that somewhere in the disordered world there was such a thing left as—let's see, what did they used to call that stuff? Don't tell me, I know—money!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Nowadays people say I'm a fine woman. They say I'm sensible, industrious, honest and kind.

BUT THEY DIDN'T ALWAYS SAY IT.

TIME WAS WHEN THEY SAID I WAS A PERFECT SAP.

Along back in my teens, people used to be mighty sorry for my mother and dad. They said they didn't see how two such fine people could have such a worthless brat. They said I fibbed. Which I did. They said I was almost too lazy to breathe. Which I was. They said I didn't have an ounce of respect in me—that I was impudent and scatter-brained and selfish and silly. All of which was true.

AND YET ALL THE TIME I ALSO KNEW I WAS A GOOD GUY!

* * *

Actually, I didn't like myself any better than they liked me—I was all tangled up with myself—I mortified and double-crossed myself constantly. Yet I knew that behind all this turmoil and confusion there was A REALLY WORTHWHILE ME. And although I disliked myself and often despaired of myself, I REALLY BELIEVED IN MYSELF.

I was sure that the time would come when I wouldn't fib to raise Cain, when I wouldn't be lazy and silly and impudent—WHEN I'D BE THE REALLY FINE PERSON I KNEW I WAS MEANT TO BE.

It came because, in spite of countless falsities and failures, I believed in myself. AND I AM SURE THAT IF OTHER PEOPLE HAD BELIEVED IN ME AS MUCH AS I BELIEVED IN MYSELF THAT DAY WOULD HAVE COME MUCH SOONER.

* * *

I often think of that when I hear people critizing the youngsters of today. I see myself so clearly mirrored in these youngsters. I see all my silliness, selfishness and smartness—

I see how these qualities irritate older people. But, remembering back, I recall how those same qualities in myself irritated and discouraged me! And I know that these youngsters, in spite of their braggadocio, ARE IRRITATED AND DISCOURAGED WITH THEMSELVES JUST AS I WAS.

I feel the confusion that lies behind their hard, young smartness—the dreams that waver behind their derision—

AND I KNOW THAT THESE YOUNG PEOPLE, IN THE FACE OF THEIR OWN FURY AND FALTERING, STILL BELIEVE IN THEMSELVES . . . AND THAT FAITH IS JUSTIFIED.

* * *

For every human that was ever worth shucks went through just what they are going through. Look, as I said before, what happened to me. If there ever was a hopeless mess, I was it, and yet I'm drawing regular wages today. MIGOSH, IF LIFE COULD MAKE A RESPECTABLE CITIZEN OUT OF ME, THEN ANYONE HAS A CHANCE. AND I'M ALL FOR GIVING THE KIDS A HAND!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Give a hearty welcome to the young people who visit your home as the guests of your son or your daughter, and convince them that you are pleased to have them in the family circle.

Be kind and considerate of your children when in the presence of their friends so that you shall not hurt their feelings or their sense of personal dignity.

But there is a vast difference in the way that children introduce their young friends to their parents.

There is joy in the voice and happiness in the eyes.

Now parents, your children will be of this sort if you have shown yourselves to be good sports with them. So measure up to the young folks.

It will pay you big dividends.

Politics and the Law

By STUART H. PERRY

Member of the Michigan Judicial Council.

Reprinted from "The Crisis of Democracy," Vol. 169, of the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, September, 1933.

THAT courts and judges should be independent, in some sense of the word, has been accepted by legal and political writers of all ages . . .

In France, and in other countries that have been influenced by French legalistic thought, great weight is attached to the doctrine of the separation of the executive, legislative and judicial powers—not from solicitude for the judicial power in particular, but from a desire to insure each of the three from interference by the others.

Much closer to our present problem was the long struggle for an independent judiciary in England, where at an early period a new conception developed of the relation of the judicial power to the other branches of government, fundamentally different from that prevailing in any other European country . . .

This independence was carried across the sea to the American colonies, where it continued for nearly half a century after the War of Independence. Then a new form of influence arose . . . destined to undermine and pervert the administration of law in America—the influence of politics . . .

Practical politics is not merely an incident or a phenomenon; it is a business, very definite in its aims and highly efficient in its technique . . . The stock in trade of practical politics is votes. Its business is the gathering of votes. Its profits are offices, the salaries attached to them, and the patronage controlled by them . . .

IT may fairly be conceded that organized politics, involving in some degree the spoils system, is necessary under our political and social system. Party government is indispensable; its worst evils are less than those that would follow its abandonment . . . It is not the writer's intent to express a general condemnation of the party system, or the use of political patronage; such condemnation is directed only against their application to the judiciary.

Practical politics thus organized tends to make every office a party asset and a political prize to be sought by political methods. Judgeships are no exception . . .

Any discussion of the subject of politics and judicial administration would be incomplete without adverting to one of the most sinister phases in the whole disintegrating process—THE INFLUENCE OF POLITICS UPON THE AMERICAN BAR.

By nature and by tradition a purely professional calling, the practice of law has become so infected by politics that it must bear a large share of the blame for the gross evils that now afflict the administration of justice in this country . . .

THE effect upon the office of Prosecuting Attorney has been especially deplorable.

By any proper appraisal the incumbent should be able, impartial and fearless, and he should approach his task as an instrument of justice rather than as an agent of vengeance.

In rural counties, the pay being too low to attract leading practitioners, it becomes a stepping stone for young lawyer-politicians. The result is inexperience where natural legal ability is called for.

In large cities, where the office is one of great power and wide political opportunities, the prosecutor often becomes a powerful political boss, and not infrequently yields to sinister influences.

The political prosecutor is a prominent factor in the domination of politics over the administration of justice. He contributes to its most demoralizing effects, and his influence favors its perpetuation.

It has also operated to lower THE GENERAL STANDARDS OF THE PROFESSION.

The young man who wanted to be a lawyer with little or no preparation would get scant consideration under a system dominated by an independent judiciary. But political motives prompt legislators to make his way easy, and the same motives deter a political bench and bar from effective resistance. Politicians are not greatly concerned with the question of whether a given individual ought to practice; they are interested chiefly in the fact that he wants to, and that he and his friends have votes . . .

Such influences make it difficult to raise standards of professional conduct. Disbarment proceedings are very irksome to a political judge, and he is loath to employ the process of contempt.

POLITICS IS CHIEFLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THOSE NOISOME BY-PRODUCTS OF OUR JUDICIARY, THE SHYSTER AND THE LOW CRIMINAL LAWYER . . .

The origin and the character of these evils indicate clearly the remedy, which is solely and inescapably THE DIVORCE OF THE JUDICIARY FROM POLITICS . . .

ALREADY the forces of reform are mobilizing. Not only have efforts been made to ameliorate the evils through which such ineffective makeshifts as the nonpartisan primary for judges and the indorsements of bar associations and civic bodies, but in a number of states there is a strong and definite movement to make judges appointive for long terms or during good behavior.

The legal press is filled with discussion of reform measures, and (much more significant) many newspapers are earnestly advocating the appointment of judges, and publishing a great volume of editorials, interviews and special articles pointing out the superior results attained under the appointive system in England and Canada and in such of our states as have an independent judiciary . . .

Palliatives and half-way measures are illusory. They are wasteful of time . . . There can be no fundamental and durable improvement in the administration of law in America until the judiciary is restored to genuine independence.
